The Pension Vetoes Before the Senate.

Senator Hawley deserves the thanks of his party and of the considerable number of Democrats who disagree with the President's pension theories for his manly and temperate criticism of the spirit of Mr. Cleveland's latest pension vetoes during yesterday's debate. His remarks were perfectly fair and dignified, and not only vindicated the Senate Pensions Committee, but put the President before the country in an even less enviable position than before. That 230 of the 300 private pension bills considered by the committee have been reported unfavorably certainly does not look like recklessness or extravagance. It by no means sustains Mr. Cleveland's sweeping accusations. Senator Hawley, in his further objections to the veto messages on the ground of their grossly unjust aspersions on the integrity of Congress, made his points so clearly and cogently that the President's accustomed apologizers seemed stricken dumb, and the ungracious task of defending him was left to Mr. Butler. Mr. Butler would have done better to keep silent. His encounter with Senator Blair contained several passages which were unfortunate, but the South Carolinian was the aggressor, and cannot very well complain if his personal references to Mr. Blair brought a severe retort.

Mr. Cleveland's challenge to the Senate, contained in his pension vetoes, was unprecedented and unwarrantable, and if it should lead to some more very decided Republican criticism of him it would not be at all surprising. [Boston Journal.

An importing house in New York city has lately received a consignment of British manufactured goods with the following instructions: "Have these goods deposited in the United States bonded warehouse, there to await the passage of the McKinley bill. In case that bill does not become a law, then hold the goods in bond until the re-election of Cleveland and a Congress that will assure us of a free trade tariff. You will then put them on the market for sale."

American workingmen fortunately will have something to say about the "re-election of Cleveland and a Congress that will assure us of a free trade tariff," and their decision is liable not to please the British manufacturers who depend upon the American market for much cheap goods. [Boston Journal.

"A Word to the Wise is Sufficient."

Catarrh is not simply an inconvenience, unpleasant to the sufferer and disgusting to others—it is a dangerous outpost of approaching disease of a more fatal character. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, by its prompt and thorough cures, shows that it is the best remedy for catarrh in all its stages. Before it is too late use Sage's Catarrh Remedy. It reaches the seat of the ailment, and is the only thing that will. You need not suffer with quick, unpleasant relief, for, if it be late, "till the decanter becomes a restless serpent," it is the natural invention of a scientific physician, "whose skill is sufficient."

A squalid "Christian" is now able to announce with certainty that there is rain and storm in the moon, same as on earth. He is now trying to discover whether there are clouds or snow.

A "Put and Call."

A "put and call" is neither a stalking-horse nor a "broker's option." It is a contract, for a consideration, giving to the holder, but there is a more serious "put and call" than this, when you are "put" to bed and your friends are "called" to see you, and you need a physician. Avoid all this by keeping in the house Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures all those troubles which, notwithstanding medical discoveries, in addition to numerous old remedies, still prevail to an alarming extent. It cures the worst cough, whether acute, lingering or chronic. For Weak Lungs, Spitting of Blood, Short Breath, Consumption, Night Sweats, and kindred affections, it surpasses all other medicines.

The Philadelphia Press is of a kindly, sympathetic nature. Only 25% of the Quaker City's population are "poor whites." It is now slaughtering of the Republican stripe, to make up a Philadelphia majority.

Reducing the Surplus.

The disposition of the surplus in the U. S. Treasury engages the attention of our statesmen, but a very simple method of disposing of it, and at the same time a reduction of the Surplus Consumptives. Since the discovery and introduction of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, there has been a marked decrease in the mortality from this dreaded disease, and it is possible to still further reduce the surplus of Consumptives. How? By keeping constantly at hand a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery, and using it according to directions, upon the appearance of the first symptoms, such as a Cough, a Cold, a Sore Throat, a Chest, or Side Pain. Taken timely, a cure is guaranteed. Trial bottles free at R. H. Moody's Drug Store.

A School of Trout.

Down where the sunshine is stirred in the water,
By zephyrs that bend the thin tops of the sedge,
The stream shallows out at the head of the meadow,
And dammed by a log, widens more at the edge.

The nettles are rank on the rich bank about it,
And out on the log straggle tussocks of grass;
Beneath the warm driftwood the cricket is chirping,
And green-headed frogs tune their throats for the class.

The little trout practice at vaulting and leaping,
And stir up the sand in their still shallow pool;
From daylight till darkness and all through the moonlight
They try every trick that is taught in their school.

They strain at a gnat and then swallow a lady bug;
Deep into the air they all dive for a fly.
But larger they're growing, and in the hard future,
The careless ones jumping at feathers must die.

Will solemnly hunt for a deep shady hole;
And like their old father—as cruel as Nero—
Will live as they please, without conscience or soul.

Miss Betty's Mistake.

Miss Campion was a little restless. She had dressed for dinner some time previously, and now moved backward and forward from her post of observation at the window to consult the little Swiss clock hanging over the writing table—for her eyes were not as good as they had been.

There were few people living who were very dear to her, and of these she was expecting this evening the two whom she loved best in the world—her goddaughter and namesake, Betty Carew, and Colin Campion, her nephew.

She had a definite object in view in bringing these young people together. A few weeks before she had had an attack of bronchitis, and this illness had suggested to her the advisability of making her will. When she began to consider how she should divide her property between Betty and Colin her heart seemed torn asunder. She could not calmly contemplate her old lace and china and all her favorite personal possessions going out of the family, for she wanted Betty to have them. Colin must, of course, have the little estate, but then, too, he must have the money to keep it up, for she did not wish Forde to be neglected after her death.

At length an idea occurred to her which, if carried out, would obviate all difficulties. Why should not Colin and Betty marry and share her fortune equally, without any troublesome division of it? With this thought in her mind Miss Campion hurried to the door to Forde, and was now awaiting Betty's arrival with some nervousness.

Her nervousness increased when she had welcomed her goddaughter and brought her into the drawing-room to tell her the news that she should make Betty understand how desirable a husband Colin would be without raising any suspicion in her mind.

"You are very tired, dear," she said, hastening to pour out a cup of tea with trembling fingers. "I shall never become reconciled to trains—they are so dirty and dusty. It is a pity we are in such a hurry always, nowadays. They managed better in the last century, when journeys were made in a leisurely manner by coach."

"If we were eighteenth century ladies, godmother, I should be at the rectory at this moment for the journey from Dewchester would have been impossible by coach. So I am glad that we were not born a hundred years ago."

"If you put it that way, dear, so am I. I hope this visit will be pleasanter than usual," she added nervously. "My nephew Colin is coming tonight; he is going to stay for some time."

"He is a doctor in London, isn't he? I have heard you speak of him."

"Yes; he has bought a practice there," answered Miss Campion. "He is very clever in his profession, and so tender and kind! it is quite beautiful to see him with children. He ought to marry; there would be always a prejudice in favor of married doctors."

"You had better tell him so," said Betty, with a smile.

"I mean to do so; and I think he will be settled before long," replied the old lady, nodding her head mysteriously.

"Oh, if he is already in love, he will not need your advice, godmother!"

"But he is not in love, my dear," returned Miss Campion hastily. "You must not think Colin is a foolish, sentimental young man. Indeed, he is considered rather cold in society; and he is as proud as you are Betty."

"Will he marry if he is not in love?" asked Betty, raising her eyebrows slightly.

"Oh, no, my dear, of course not!"

"Then you think he will obediently fall in love when you tell him that he ought to marry. He must have his emotions under admirable control!"

"He would not fail in love with any one," said Miss Campion, with only a vague understanding of Betty's sarcasm; "but he cannot fail to see how sweet a girl—"

"I see," interrupted Betty quickly, "you are saving him a great deal of unnecessary trouble in suggesting whom as well as when he should marry."

"Colin would not marry any girl whom he could not like and respect," said Miss Campion, a little anxiously.

"Oh, no! But he is not sentimental," suggested Betty. "The girl he marries will be a happy woman."

"She will, indeed!" agreed her godmother. "I am so glad that you appreciate Colin."

Soon after Betty had left the drawing room to dress for dinner Mr. Campion arrived. When the first greetings were over his aunt remarked, tentatively:

"I have asked Betty Carew to stay with me while you are here. Colin, you don't know Betty?"

"No," said Colin.

"She is a very sweet girl," said Miss Campion, nervously.

"Is she?"

"A very sweet girl. Do you know, Colin, I have thought lately that you ought to marry? Married doctors are always the most successful."

"And you think Miss Betty would make a good doctor's wife?" questioned Colin, suppressing a smile at his aunt's transparent plot.

"She is very dear to me, Colin; I should like Betty to be mistress here when I die," she returned wistfully.

Colin kissed her and said gently:

"I should like to please you in all things. And Betty, but I must reserve the right of choosing my own wife. I hold some antiquated views about marriage—among the rest, that a man should love his wife. Moreover, there is the chance that Miss Carew would not be overcome by my many and undoubted charms. But we will let that pass."

"I won't say anything more about it," said Miss Campion, with a sigh; but when you know her you will understand how happy she will make some one some day."

At dinner Colin sat opposite to Betty, and, as he watched her beautiful, tender face, he was quite prepared to indorse his aunt's opinion of her goddaughter, though Betty was anything but kind to him.

"Don't you think Colin is very much like the painting of my grandfather in the drawing room, Betty?" asked Miss Campion.

"Do you mean that very handsome soldier hanging between the windows?" queried Betty, regarding Colin critically. "Oh, no, godmother; I cannot see the faintest resemblance."

Miss Campion hastily changed the subject, to spare her nephew's feelings, though Colin was inwardly delighted at Betty's frankness—the more so because he was undoubtedly good-looking.

Presently another appeal was made to Betty by the Dewchester lady.

"Do you know, dear, Colin was placed first in every examination that he went in for when he was walking the hospitals?"

"Really?" said Betty, incredulously, raising to Colin the frankest, most innocent of eyes. "I thought clever people became doctors sometimes?"

For a moment Colin was disconcerted, trying to snub him, but Miss Campion attributed Betty's rudeness to fatigue and sent her off to bed very soon after dinner.

* * * * * * *

During the next few days Betty found numberless opportunities of slighting Colin, but she was so gentle and affectionate to her godmother that he retained his first opinion as to her sweetness of character. He accepted her slights with submissive good temper, and received his aunt's praises with such genuine amusement, that Betty was at last compelled to confess to herself that her estimate of him had been altogether wrong. She felt that she could not respect him very much, for a man who would marry any girl for expediency's sake was not worthy of much honor; but she would be more polite to him, as his conduct would not in any way affect her.

Colin was very grateful for this change in her attitude toward him, and a friendship sprang up between them which on his side deepened into love. Of her feelings he could guess little. She was invariably sweet and frank; but the fear of losing her friendship by attempting to gain her love for some time prevented him from putting his fate into her hands. On the last day of her visit the longing of his heart overcame his fear, and he poured out all his soul to her, not noticing that her face was hardening at his words.

"Tell me, Betty! Give me one word of hope! Have I any chance?" he pleaded.

She turned toward him then, her face white and stern, her mouth wearing a faint, bitter smile.

"How well you do it!" she said in a harsh voice.

"Do it! What do you mean?" he asked, his voice changing, too. "Don't you understand? I love you, Betty!"

"Hush!" she interrupted, harshly. "That is quite enough. No, I can give you no hope; you have no chance. Never speak to me of this again!"—and, rising from her garden chair, she went into the house and up to her own room.

This was what it all meant then! How blind she had been! She was the "sweet girl" whom Miss Campion thought a suitable wife for Colin. She had been invited here in order that Colin might see if she would "do." How grateful she ought to feel!

She went down stairs presently, feeling glad that this was her last day at Forde. She found Miss Campion sitting alone in the drawing-room, looking a little displeased.

"I am so cross, my dear," said the old lady, drawing Betty to a seat by her side. "Colin has ridden over to the Ladbrokes's for dinner. It was very thoughtless for him not to remember that this was your last evening."

"It does not matter, godmother," said Betty, with gentle coldness. "I would rather spend it alone with you."

"Would you, dear? I thought you and Colin had got on more comfortably lately."

"It was only a surface agreement," answered Betty rather proudly. "We are too entirely opposed in character to be really friends."

"You will hardly believe it, Betty, but I had planned a match between you two. I thought you were so well suited to each other, and it would have been so nice for me to think of your living here together after my death!"

"And you spoke to him about it?" questioned Betty, without raising her eyes.

"Yes; on the evening you came; told him what I wished. But I was to meet the fate of all match-makers, you see," she added, sighing. "Colin said he would never marry unless he were in love—that he must reserve to himself the right of choosing his wife. And, as you say, dear, you and he were very far from falling in love."

"Did he say that?" asked Betty, eagerly. "Wouldn't he agree to what you wished? Then I have wronged him terribly; he is ever so much nicer than I thought!"

"You thought?" questioned Miss Campion, slowly. "Ah, I remember now I told you that I was going to speak to him, and you believed that he would marry any one I suggested! How foolish and wrong I have been! You might have liked him if you had not been so prejudiced beforehand, and everything might have been different!"

"Do not grieve, godmother," said Betty, gently. "If we have not been friends, it is quite my own fault. I had no right to judge him before I knew him."

But, in spite of her brave words, her heart sank strangely. She knew that she would have accepted Colin's love had she understood what he was offering her—for her belief in his unworthiness, though it had destroyed her trust in him, had not been strong enough to kill her love. And now her life would be one long sorrow for that mistake. Colin would never speak to her of his love again—had she not peremptorily forbidden him? He had gone away now to avoid her, and after to-morrow she would never see him again. But at any rate she would see him once more, and then—Oh, surely he could see that she was sorry for having misjudged him so!

But Colin remained at the Ladbrokes' for the night and had not returned to Forde when she left it the next morning for home.

Betty had been right when she assumed that Colin had gone away on the previous afternoon to avoid her. Her harsh rejection of his proposal had aroused his anger, and he felt too hurt to bid her goodby. But on his return to London his anger grew less as time passed on, though his love for Betty did not diminish. As his thoughts dwelt on her so constantly, he began to seek for some reason for her unkindness; and the more he considered the matter the more improbable did her conduct appear. Her harshness and anger the day he proposed to her were so at variance with her character that he at last concluded that some misunderstanding must exist in her mind which he ought to explain away.

This idea led him to make a journey to Devonshire a few days later, though his hopes of winning Betty's love were small.

He walked over to the rectory on the morning after his arrival, and was shown into the empty drawing-room by a neat maid-servant, who told him that Betty would be there in a few minutes, as she said she could easily be sent for to the church, whither she had gone to practice. Colin, however, decided to get himself, and had no difficulty in finding the sacred edifice, which was close at hand.

He seated himself just inside the door, struck by the beauty of the picture before him. The old church was cool and dim, save where, by chance, alone glorified by the sunlight, which gleaned through the colored windows, while the whole building was filled with the low, definitive notes of the organ.

Colin sat down near the door and waited patiently till Betty should come. He heard her dismiss the little boy with a kind word of thanks for his services—saw her shut and lock the organ; and then he waited in almost trembling expectancy while she came slowly down the centre aisle.

"Betty!" he said softly, rising as he spoke.

"Dr. Campion!"

"You seem surprised to see me here," he said gently, walking on by her side.

The sun shone down hotly on her as she leaned against the stonework of the doorway, revealing to Colin how pale and thin she had become, and how sad were the eyes and lips.

"You have been ill?" he said, looking down at her anxiously.

"Oh, no; I am perfectly well unusually well, indeed!" she answered hastily, nervously tingering the flowers in her belt.

"You are surprised to see me here, seeing how we parted," he said, eyeing her intently. "We did not even say good-by."

"Have you come to wish me good-by now?" she asked, trying to smile.

"No. I have come to ask you why you were so angry that afternoon. You treated my proposal as if I had intended it as an insult; you spoke to me as if I were cruel. I want to know what I quite deserved it, Betty—from you?"

"I—it was a mistake," she faltered. "I thought you were acting; I did not believe in your love. I—I am very sorry."

"Betty," he said, taking her hands gently in his, "if you had believed in my love, would your answer have been different?"

"I—I think it might have been."

"Dear, do you believe in it now? Can you trust my word?"

"Yes," she said, looking up at him for the first time. [Exchange.

Democratic Newspaper Recruits.

It has often been said that the Democratic party was at a disadvantage because of the greater number and superior ability, as a whole, of the Republican newspapers throughout the land. This was but natural. The Republican party comprises a very large proportion of the intelligence of the country, and it follows, as a matter of course, the Republican press shows a higher average of prosperity as well as of ability than the press of the opposite party. There are exceptions to this rule, but the observation of every public man and journalist will confirm the truth of this statement. This being so, it is a fact of some little interest to note that the Democratic party has lately received a number of newspaper recruits. In this city "The New-York Times" and "The Evening Post," "Harper's Weekly" and "The Commercial Advertiser," and in New-England "The Springfield Republican" and "The Providence Journal" must all now be recognized as of Democratic party standing. There is no visible difference between any one of them and their Democratic neighbors, except, perhaps, that they are more partisan and unfair than the Democratic papers of long standing. "The Evening Post," for example, shows much more bitterness and a much greater capacity for injustice in dealing with Republicans than "The World" or "The Sun." But this is the rule with converts, if we may pay them the compliment of calling them by that name.

It is true that the course of these newspapers is about the same as it has been during the last four years. But the events of the last few weeks have for the first time made their real attitude clear. During the campaign of 1884, and so long as there seemed a possibility of the nomination of Mr. Blaine in 1888, their constant protest has been that they opposed the Republican party because it was untrue to its high traditions. It followed a rational candidate, and they were doing the party a great service in inflicting upon it the discipline of defeat. But now Mr. Blaine has with a rare magnanimity taken himself out of the way, and a candidate has been nominated who embodies in himself the best traditions of the party and whose character they admit to be impregnable against attack. Yet these newspapers, forgetting all they have said, assail the party with undiminished virulence, even resorting to the mean subterfuge of representing that it is in favor of free whiskey, whereas, in fact, it has done more for temperance than any other political party organized in the history of mankind. This means simply that the mask is off. These papers have not been Democratic in fact for years past, and their Democratic professions has been merely a pretext, which need deceive no one any longer.

We doubt if these papers will be of any great service to the party with which they are now openly identified. So long as they were able to keep up a show of independence they may have exerted some influence simply by reason of that fact. The mere name of independent makes a certain impression upon the minds of the unthinking. But now that it has become apparent that they are simply Democratic newspapers, nothing more and nothing less, they will soon be merged in the Democratic press of the country and cease to be regarded as in any sense a separate element. Their stockholders are likely to discover that it is easier for a newspaper to change its politics than it is to keep its readers after having done so. Most of them, it is to be remembered, are papers of limited circulation. The readers of "The Post" would probably be surprised to know how small its circulation is. As for "The Commercial Advertiser," it is almost an exaggeration to speak of it as circulating at all. To be exact, we should say that it has a small daily stagnation. "The Springfield Republican" used to be an interesting paper, but its vagaries long since deprived it of any influence, while the indignation of Rhode Island Republicans at the treacherous course of "The Providence Journal" is so great that it must result in serious injury to its prospects. The papers among these having the largest circulation are "Harper's Weekly" and "The New York Times," but both are likely to find that many of their readers, now that the situation has been made clear, are not willing to go over bodily to the Democratic party, as they have done, and take their stand on the side of ballot-box frauds, corruption and repudiation, Free Trade and Free Whiskey. Prohibition in Portland.

"He had visited over forty saloons in Portland where liquor was sold openly by the glass." [A correspondent.

It is one of the oft-recurring duties we have to meet to answer the inquiries sent to us from abroad as to the workings of our liquor law in this state and particularly in this city. Somebody has been visiting us, and undertaken to report what he has done and seen here, or somebody from Maine states for the information of the public what the condition of things is. In both cases the testimony is unfavorable to our prohibitory law, and the lesson is apt to be that the people of Maine are ignorant of the true facts, and are either hypocrites or fanatics in maintaining it. The friends of the cause in other states, many of them Maine people interested in the good name of their native state, distressed by these reports, write to us as one likely to know the facts to tell them the truth in the case. We have had two such letters the past week, one from Ohio to the other from Oregon, which at some cost of time and strength we have felt obliged to answer. We are constrained, therefore, to put into brief compass what we regard as the actual facts in this matter, for an answer once for all, to inquiries of this sort. We do this from our own knowledge, re-enforced by the testimony and approval of our officials, the sheriff and his deputies, the city marshal and police, and the judge of the municipal court.

I. There are no open places for the sale of liquor in Portland. By this we mean there are none similar to the open and public saloons in cities of other states. Except at the City Agency, it is nowhere sold as other articles of common use are, such as sugar, flour, provisions, etc. There is no place where liquors are kept for sale in sight, exposed to the view of the police or the ordinary passers in the streets. There is none having a sign on the outside or bottles of liquors in the windows to notify the public of the sale or presence of liquors within.

II. All sales of liquor in Portland are made under concealment. If they occur in hotels, they are in a private room remote from public observation. If in "saloons" so called these are so constructed that the business is secret. The liquors are kept out of sight, in cellars and attics, in recesses under floors, in stables, in holes dug into the ground, in all sorts of hidden and secret places. They are kept in vessels unlikely to attract notice, in pails and tubs, and tin sprinklers and pitchers and teapots, and others of humbler uses. Most frequently of all, they are now sold from bottles kept in the pocket. In not a few cases, a "saloon," so reported, is simply a black pint bottle hidden under an Irish woman's apron.

III. All places where liquors are sold are carefully guarded from incursions by the police. Men and boys are employed about the doors to watch for the approach of the officers and other suspicious people, and give warning in time. Against these the doors are shut and barred, till the liquors kept as aforesaid are destroyed or otherwise put out of the way. When the officers get access, there are none to be seen and nobody in charge of the premises. The supplies of these places are brought at night or early in the morning, or at some other time when the notice of the officers may be escaped. Every precaution is taken to cover up the business as one that is known to be illegal, disgraceful, and dangerous.

IV. The means for enforcing the law and suppressing the sale are numerous and effective. First, a special force of officers appointed directly by the sheriff is employed for the express and sole purpose of detecting the business. There are three in this county called the "liquor deputies," who have an office, a team, and all apparatus requisite for opening doors and packages. These men are constantly busy in searching for and seizing liquors, arresting their keepers, and after sentence by the court, in pouring the liquors seized into the common sewers of the city. Next, there is the entire force of the city police, who attend to this as well as other duties pertaining to their office. They are independent of the sheriffs, but act in harmony with them. The libels against the liquors seized by both classes of officers are posted in the corridors of the City Hall, often amounting to hundreds in number, that they may be seen and read by all. The Municipal court is in session nearly every day, in which from one to half a dozen or more are tried, fined, and sent to jail for their acts.

V. The "licenses" so called, issued by the United States Internal Revenue, are merely receipts for the payment of taxes assessed on liquor dealers. They give no warrant to sell, but they enable those who have them from heavy penalties inflicted by the Government upon dealers who have not paid them. They are taken out mostly by druggists and other persons who trade in liquors for medicinal and manufacturing purposes.

VI. Under the continuous application of this legal machinery, the business of selling liquor unlawfully in Portland is reduced to a minimum. It is only what can and dares be done without risk to escape the clutches of the law. It is confined to the comparatively small amounts that ooze through the meshes of the net so carefully devised to arrest them. We think that notwithstanding all the representations of partisans and superficial observers, on judge without a knowledge of the facts, common sense will satisfy any reasonable man that a business so hedged in by restrictions and hazards must be greatly curtailed. While not absolutely extinguished, which is done by no law in relation to the evils against which it is enacted, the law is largely effectual for its purpose. Liquor selling and drinking are branded as a curse, under the reprobation of the community, and what little remains of it is driven into holes and disreputable corners where it still drags along a miserable and moribund existence.

VII. The Prohibitory Law is upheld by the public sentiment of the State. It was put into the Constitution a few years ago by a popular majority of over forty-seven thousand. There are, indeed, not a few who prefer license laws instead of it, and who are ready to join in disparaging it as inefficient, but they constitute a small minority of the whole.

Even in the recent State Democratic Convention a resolution favoring license received comparatively few votes. The people of Maine, after an experience of its workings for a third of a century, have made it a part of their fundamental law, and we know of no signs that they will ever be induced to abolish it.

The above statements have particular reference to the city of Portland, but with some variations and exceptions they are believed to apply also to the other cities of the state. In the country generally, the sale scarcely exists. [The Christian Union.

England Will Yet Give Us Trouble.

Sooner or later the American people, as a matter of self defense, if not as a matter of national self respect, will be compelled to wipe the last vestige of English power from off this continent. Three times in our history we have clipped her pinions and baffled her desperate purposes. American victories were made secure by solemn treaties; British claims to possession of our country were formally relinquished; but the desperate resolve to feed and fatten on America has never been completely abandoned. In our times of peril they have treated us with treachery, continually and scorn; in the days of our prosperity they have changed their tune, and apparently manifested feelings of kindness and affection for us. But all through the years of our history the purposes of England have been unchanged.

Fairly conquered in the war of the revolution, they returned again in 1812, and with vandal torch they fired our nation's capital without even the poor justification of military necessity. They came again in 1861-5 with aid and comfort to the national enemy; and while they gave us honeyed words to calm our fears, their ships were ready and their guns were slotted to menace and destroy us. In recent years, secure in the friendship of Cleveland and Bayard, Canadian constables have hauled down our nation's flag upon the high seas without a word of protest from the State Department.

Today, while they are making love to the Democratic powers on the banks of the Potomac, they are vigorously extending their railway connections and strengthening their fortifications on our northern borders. We know, we feel, we are weakness in the matter of coast defenses, and though we should eventually succeed in driving them out, still it is clearly with in their power when they please to give us lots of trouble and to inflict incalculable injury.

Yet not in armored vessels, nor in rifled cannon, nor in British bayonets lies the greatest menace to the peace and safety of the United States. There is now in existence a decidedly pro-British party in America. No reference is made to the British-American citizen, organized or individual. The Democratic party is the English garrison in America. It is intimately connected with the Cobden Club; in alliance, offensive and defensive, for the purpose of inflicting on America the English free trade system. There is a hearty bond of sympathy between the American State Department and the Scotland Yard detective agency of the English Government. The pending extradition treaty is intended as a pledge of their mutual affection. Under this proposed treaty England would be enabled to make the United States her policeman and to hand over to the tender mercies of Dublin Castle Irish-Americans suspected of the crime of loving Ireland.

There is the old bond of sympathy and a spirit of mutual desire to help between the British and the old slave power. There is everywhere between England and the Democratic party the highest incentive to assist one another. Indeed, this mutual affection has materialized in the shape of active sympathy and assistance to the Democratic party from England in their united effort to destroy the American policy of protection. The Cobden Club is to-day, with the agencies of the press, its pamphlets, its college professors and the money contributions, taking an active hand in the election of our President and House of Representatives.

No great nation in Europe would tolerate this interference for an hour. Imagine France or Russia or Italy spending money and spreading literature in Germany with the purpose of overthrowing the industrial system of the German empire. They would not dare do it. Yet the American nation, with the connivance of a great political party, tamely submits to it. We may yet feel to our cost the consequences of the alliance between England and the Democratic party. We may baffle them again by peacefully overwhelming them at the ballot box in November, or we may some day be compelled, by the instinct of self preservation, to resort to force. Belfast Academy Fifty Years Ago.

BY JOSEPH WILLIAMSON.

In the historical alcove of our Free Library may be found a small pamphlet, entitled "Catalogue of the Officers and Students of Belfast Academy, for the years 1836-7," which is believed to be the earliest list of those who received instruction at that institution that has been preserved. A perusal of its time-stained pages has awakened many reminiscences of the receding past, and brought back many pleasant memories. Although I must have been one of the youngest pupils of that time, I retain a vivid recollection of nearly all my companions whose names appear upon the roll. In recalling them, the old school-room, with its unadorned walls, and rows of mahogany-colored desks rises freshly to my view, and I almost hear the voice of the master summoning classes for recitation to the quadrantal benches around the stove, or sending me to conspicuous and condign expiation on "the rogue's seat." "Many of the hearts that throbbed so gaily then, have ceased to beat; many of the looks that shone so brightly then have ceased to glow; the hands we grasped have grown cold; the eyes we sought have hid their lustre in the grave;" yet the tender grace of days passed there in the interchange of study and friendship can never be effaced.

For some time immediately before 1836, the Academy had been closed to the muses, but in the fall of that year, a sale of Aroostook land enabled much needed repairs upon the building to be made, and the educational work of the institution to be resumed. The trustees took measures to secure a suitable preceptor, and were fortunate in the selection of Mr. Richard Pike, of West Prospect, who, at the age of twenty-three years, had just graduated at Bowdoin College. His salary was fixed at two hundred dollars, in addition to tuition fees.

Mr. Pike, the son of Robert and Hannah (Smith) Pike, was born June 6, 1813, in that part of Prospect which is now Searsport. An injury which he received in early life, and which resulted in permanent lameness, led him to habits of study and reading. Leaving home in 1830, he entered an academy at Greenfield, N. H., and two years later was admitted to college. His education was attained under many difficulties, and although compelled to spend portions of the course in teaching, he took high rank as a scholar. After remaining in Belfast nearly two years, he pursued the study of theology at Cambridge, and subsequently became a tutor at Bowdoin College. In 1843, he was ordained as pastor of the Third Religious (Unitarian) Society in Dorchester, Mass. During the same year, he married Miss Frances West Atherton, a native of Searsport, and daughter of the late Abel W. Atherton. After a ministry of twenty years, Mr. Pike died of consumption, at the age of forty-nine. His widow, who is favorably known as an authoress, and their four children, survive him. His son, William A. Pike, recently a professor at the Maine College of Agriculture, now occupies a similar position in the University of Minnesota.

"To condense the character of Mr. Pike in a brief statement," wrote one of his contemporaries, "I should say he was mild, but determined; generous, but exact; modest, almost to a fault; always prompt to his engagements, and thorough in his dealing with them; slow to make up his opinion, but quick to publish it when it was made up; one of great devotion, of vast practical goodness; a faithful husband, good father, steadfast friend, earnest pastor, and wise counsellor, who was full of hope and patience and prayer." A farewell letter to his society, written shortly before his death, when he was on the threshold of the eternal world, is singularly beautiful and impressive. As a teacher, Mr. Pike possessed a tireless energy and an unremitting fidelity.

"Yet he was kind, or if severe in aught,
The love he bore to learning was in fault."

Besides Mr. Pike, the catalogue gives the names of "Miss Mary Pike, Assistant," and "Joseph F. Hall, Writing Master," as "officers of instruction." The former, a sister of the Principal, and somewhat older, pursued the same taste for study which distinguished him. She had been well educated, and was a faithful, though a somewhat exacting teacher. Her death took place at Searsport, Jan. 21, 1856, at the age of forty-seven years.

Mr. Hall was the son of Frye Hall, of Belfast. While a minor, his skill in the art of writing caused his election as clerk of the Maine House of Representatives. He entered mercantile life, and resided in Boston, Portland, and Bangor. In 1857, an appointment on the military staff of Governor Williams gave him the title of Colonel. About 1865, he removed to Lincolnville, which town he represented in the legislature of 1868, and where his death occurred July 21, 1873, aged 55. He married Miss Mary M. Farrow, who now resides in Boston. Bordman Hall, U. S. Assistant District Attorney for Massachusetts, is their son. Col. Hall was a man of refined tastes, and of social qualities.

The following is a list of the principal books used in the Academy, not one of which now retains its place in our schools, with the exception perhaps of Webster's Dictionary and the Greek Testament.

NEWS AND GOSSIP FROM ALL OVER THE STATE.

THE LARGEST CENTRE-BOARD SCHOONER EVER BUILT.

Following is a description of the centre-board schooner now building at Waldoboro: She is the largest center-board schooner ever built. Her length of keel is 225 feet, her breadth is 58 feet, depth of hold 21 feet and her measurement will be 1,800 tons. She will have five masts, of Oregon pine, and her foremast, mainmast, mizzenmast, spankermast and jigger will be each 115 feet in length, while the topmasts will be each 56 feet. The diameter of the top of her masts at the cap will be 22 inches. There will be used in her construction 450 tons of white oak from Virginia, 800,000 feet hard pine from Georgia, and 75 to 200 tons of iron. She will have two anchors which will each weigh nearly 6,000 pounds, and 180 fathoms of 2 1-4 inch chain weighing 60,000 pounds. Her outboard planking will be 6 inches thick from keel to top, and her inside ceiling will be from 10 to 14 inches in thickness. She will have two full decks running the entire length of the vessel and nine hatches. She will have five jibs, and 7,000 yards of canvas will be used. She will be launched in October. There will soon be employed in the yard from 100 to 150 men who will push her along to completion as soon as possible. Her owners are Governor Ames of Massachusetts, Oakes A. Ames, Fred L. Ames and W. T. Hart of Boston, Hon. Frank S. Stevens of Swansea, Capt. J. F. Davis and Capt. C. A. Davis, who will command her, all of Massachusetts, and others. She will run in the coal trade between Baltimore and Providence for William H. Jordan of Worcester, Mass., who is one of the largest coal dealers in New England. This great craft will have all the modern improvements in handling sail, anchors and cargo, and will carry a small crew in proportion to her size.

FRUIT DEPARTMENT OF STATE FAIR.

The sixteenth annual exhibition of the Maine State Pomological Society will be held in connection with the Maine State Agricultural Society, on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, September 11, 12, 13 and 14, 1888, in the exhibition building in the State Fair Park, Lewiston.

The premium list has been carefully revised and several changes have been made which were considered advisable by the executive committee, some of which are noted: For best dish of Baldwins, Rhode Island greenings, and Roxbury russets there are three premiums each, $5, $3 and $2. For this premium the dish must consist of twelve specimens only. The premiums are very liberal and it is hoped there will be a large number of plates on exhibition.

In the canned fruit department the premiums offered for best variety of canned fruit, preserves, &c., are $8 and $5.

Premiums are offered for best exhibition of fruit grown by exhibitor, to occupy a space not exceeding 3x8 feet, equal reference to be had to varieties and kinds of fruit, and taste shown in making the display. The premiums are $5, $3 and $2.

The executive officers of the society are Charles S. Pope, president, Manchester; D. H. Knowlton, secretary, Farmington; H. W. Brown, Newburg; L. H. Blossom, Turner; J. W. True, New Gloucester. For further particulars address either of the above.

The premiums offered by the society are liberal and the executive officers of the society are determined to make this department of the State Fair one of the most attractive ever held. Other announcements will be made later.

DRAINAGE AT THE STATE PRISON.

For the past number of years Dr. H. C. Levensaler, physician at the Maine State Prison, has recommended the drainage of water from the prison quarry, and in his last report, after the introduction of the Oyster river water, said that a better system of sewerage was demanded and that ample water should be furnished to flush the sewer. Within the past two years, the Governor and Council, together with Warden Bean and the prison inspectors, have looked this important matter over thoroughly and see that this large body of stagnant water within the prison walls, is highly detrimental to the sanitary well being of the institution. Last week a committee consisting of Councillors Hunt and Rand and Dr. A. G. Young, secretary of the State Board of Health, visited the prison and are of the opinion that a sewer should at once be laid to the river and the stagnant water drained away, with the stagnant water in the quarry added to it, and all the excreta from the lavoratories within the walls and filth without which will pass into the proposed sewers.

THE STATE TREASURY.

State Treasurer Burleigh last week turned over the funds of the state to the new commissioner of the Treasury, Hon. George L. Beal. The following is the statement: "Cash checks, receipts and bonds representing as described hereon $1,113,278.51, this amount being the entire cash assets in the Treasury of Maine, and in banks to the credit of the treasury at the close of business July 14, 1888 as shown by the books of the office." Among the items are the following:

Cash balance July 14, 1888, as shown by the cash books	$177,590.27
Sinking fund	947,840.00
Check on Suffolk National Bank, Boston	20,247.58
Funds of Union Mutual Life Insurance Company	100,000.00
Funds of Maine Benefit Association	29,047.21
Provident Aid Society funds	9,263.40
Agricultural College funds	148,200.00
War debt funds belonging to towns and plantations	4,700.00
Cash in banks	176,472.03

A MAINE CAPTAIN SAVED BY HIS TEETH.

Captain Daniel Mallock, of Eastport, found his fishing schooner, Randolph, adrift the other night. He boarded her and hoisted the foresail. A stiff breeze from the west took her off the rocks, but as a hole had been stove in her bottom, she capsized and sunk in ten fathoms of water. Capt. Mallock jumped into the boat which was made fast to the schooner. He tried in vain to unite the line which held her, but the strain was so great it was impossible. He had nothing with him to cut it, and as the boat was disappearing below the surface and himself with it, he grabbed the rope with his teeth, and by dint of vigorous gnawing finally cut in two a nine strand rope, and freed his boat, but not until his head had been drawn under water a number of times in his efforts to unfasten the rope. The schooner was owned in Yarmouth, N. S., and had a complete fit-out for a fishing cruise. She was a total loss with everything on board.

OUR GRAND SUMMER CLIMATE.

Mr. E. C. Allen, whose extensive travel in our own country and whose eleven trips abroad, in England and on the Continent, have given him wide opportunity for observation of climates, people, and scenery, which have been made good use of, says that the climate and other physical conditions of our own State, when compared with the noted summer resorts of our great country or of Europe, are far in advance of either, and that it is only by such comparisons that the advantages of Maine come to the front and are given first choice over other localities by those who have money to spend at summer resorts, and have made the tour of such places in the Old World as well as the new. Maine's grand summer climate and atmosphere can never be taken from her, and will forever give us the advantage.

CAMP MEETING.

Next Thursday, the temperance camp-meeting season in Maine will begin with the meeting of the W. C. T. U. at Sebago Lake. Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens, vice-president of the National W. C. T. U. will have charge. Several prominent speakers will be present and excellent musical talent is engaged. In putting the subject of temperance before the people, these camp-meetings do efficient service, and should be largely attended. Following this meeting will be the Maine temperance camp-meeting at the same place, July 28, 29; the annual meeting at Lake Maranoosuk, Aug. 11-12; that at Richmond, Aug. 20-23; and that of Somerset association at Madison, Sept. 1-2.

A SUIT ABOUT A MOOSE.

The noted hunter and guide, Isaac H. James, of Eustis, has brought a civil suit against Deputy Sheriff T. P. Wood, of Kingfield, for damage occasioned James by acts of Wood while serving in the capacity of fish and game warden. Last winter James found a moose stuck in the snow and nearly dead, as he represents. He took the animal home, nursed it up and kept it. James offered, if he had violated the law, to make proper amends to the State, but wished to keep the moose. Wood, however, insisted on liberating the animal. James now brings suit for damages.

IN GENERAL.

The cottage of the late Governor Bodwell, at Small Point, will be occupied during the next few weeks by Joseph H. Manley, Esq., with an Augusta party.

D. M. Frye, of Springvale, has been appointed a trustee of Alfred, reformed.

Seventy-five candidates for admission to Bowdoin were examined at Commencement, and the indications are that the incoming class will be the largest in recent years.

On motion of Mr. Dingley, of Maine, the House passed a bill granting a remonstrance to Hon. A. R. G. Smith, of Whitefield, to give him the rank of surgeon in the regiment in which he served in the war.

Mr. Fred Chase, of Augusta, is trying some very pretty experiments with carrier doves, sending them between Squirrel Island and Portland. A dove let loose on Squirrel Island was at her cote in Augusta in an hour and a half, bearing a message.

The collections for internal revenue for this district as shown by leaves in books of Collector Page for the first year since the consolidation of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont under one district, shows a grand total of $466,994.96.

Mr. Edmund M. Leary, of Whitefield, who was nominated by Congressman Dingley for a cadetship at West Point as the result of a competitive examination last fall, has successfully passed the physical and mental examination and been enrolled as a cadet.

Mr. Charles H. Verrill, of Auburn, has been discharged from signal service at Portland, at his own request, endorsed by Congressman Dingley, to enable him to accept a $1200 clerkship in Col. Wright's Bureau of Labor at Washington.

Russel Sage is full of his purchase of the Grand Southern Railroad of New Brunswick. This road, Mr. Sage says, is to be developed into an important property. The intention, he says, is to extend the road from St. Stephen, N. B., to Mount Desert Island, directly along the coast, which he declares incomparably the finest coast in the country for summer resorts.

The following are the principal amendments to the Sundry Civil bill: Furnishing water supply to Government buildings at Portland, $2,000; Crabtree Island Light House, $13,000; Lubec Narrows, $12,000; Kennebec Arsenal repairs, $2,000; inducting water works, $2,000. The committee also authorized the Department of Justice to employ counsel to protect the interests of the United States before the Court of Claims in the matter of the French spoliation claims.

It has not yet been decided by the Maine commission when Maine monuments at Gettysburg are to be dedicated. By some it is thought that the 19th of October, the anniversary of Sheridan's great victory over Early, at Cedar Creek, would be an eminently proper time for the dedicatory service. Others think that the monuments better not be dedicated until another season, when a Maine day at Gettysburg is suggested, and an oration by some Maine soldier. Whenever these dedicatory services occur, they will be on a grand scale.

Between thirty and forty Italians were discharged from work upon the new water works at Portland, last Saturday, to make room for native workmen. Since then the Italians have been living in an old freight house, Franklin wharf. They will return to New York Saturday night.

A few nights ago, says the Bangor Whig, Conductor J. Holt, of the New Brunswick Railway, put up in Presque Isle, at the Presque Isle House. He had about him at the time a considerable sum of money, some his own and some belonging to the railway. On retiring for the night he left, it is said, about $400 or $500 of his own money in his trousers' pocket, and put the railway money under his pillow. He neglected to lock the door, and when he awoke in the morning his own money was missing. It is reported that there is a clue to the robber.

The dreaded buffalo bug has made its appearance in Maine. Carpets have been nearly destroyed, costly dresses spoiled and articles of wearing apparel greatly damaged.

A serious case of accidental shooting occurred at the head of the bay, South Thomaston, July 20th. One of a party of haymakers, while shooting at a target with a revolver, wounded Merrill Fiske in the left side. The ball was extracted with difficulty. The wound is a very serious and painful one, but not necessarily fatal.

A man applied for a pension at the Maine State Agency in Augusta the other day, and being asked on what ground he thought himself entitled to a pension, answered "drunkenness." The astonished pension agent told him that pensions are only granted for disability contracted in the army. "I know that," said the applicant. "Drunkenness is my disability, and I contracted it in the army."

The Portland Company has put a sixty ton boiler in the Maine General Hospital and will put a new boiler in the steamer Valora.

Marshall E. Curtis, proprietor of the Curtis Farm, Fortune's Rock, Biddeford, went out in a dory July 20th, to attend to his lobster traps. It was very foggy, and, as he did not return at noon, his family became alarmed. Late in the afternoon two young men discovered his body floating near the shore. His head was badly bruised by coming in contact with the rocks. He was 50 years old and leaves a wife. His hotel is full of guests and he was looking forward to a successful season.

Political Points.

The Independent Labor party will support Harrison and Morton.

The bandanna handkerchief will be handy when the Democrats are wiping away the tears of defeat.

Senators Frye and Hale and Congressman Reed of Maine are expected to take the stump in Indiana.

Samuel Hoar, son of Judge E. Rockwood Hoar, has returned to the Republican party, which he left in 1884.

The farmers, laborers and stock raisers of Texas do not agree with Roger Mills in putting wool on the free list.

Twelve business men of Cambridge City, Ind., who voted for Cleveland are tired of him, and this year will vote for Harrison.

Not a single Republican vote was cast in the House for free wool. Yet our opponents have insisted that the Republican party was not united.

More than 80,000 young men in New York State are connected with the Republican League clubs, and the number is steadily increasing.

Partisans miss the mark in attempting to ridicule Mr. Harrison's attendance on church and his Christian character. [Athens (Ga.) Banner-Watchman.

A prominent Democratic politician, who has just returned from a tour through New York State declares that Hill will run 20,000 votes ahead of Cleveland.

Colonel D. S. Alexander of Buffalo, formerly confidential adviser to Indiana's great war Governor, Morton, has been chosen by General Harrison for his private secretary.

Three Democratic ex-Mayors of Troy—J. M. Warren, George B. Warren and W. L. Van Alstyne—are among the Democrats in the city who have renounced Cleveland and free trade.

The Troy Times prints interviews with seven leading manufacturers of Cohoes, all of whom have hitherto been Democrats, but are now Harrison-and-Morton men on the protection issue.

The Democrats of Bangor are to have a barbecue and ratification meeting at that place on Aug. 1-4. A whole ox will be roasted. Hon. W. L. Putnam, candidate for Governor, will be present.

The democrats boast of several million dollars already subscribed for their campaign. This will doubtless make somebody believe that there is something to be made by voting for free trade.

A life-long Democrat in Kennebunk writes the Biddeford Journal that he is "tired and sick" of the Democratic party, and he proposes to go out of it and stay out, and will henceforth act with the Republican party.

Mrs. H. V. Bronson of Peninsula, Ohio, has in her possession, and has raised for the present campaign, the largest flag used in that section during the Gen. Harrison campaign 48 years ago. It still flies with the name of Harrison upon it.

If the present government can succeed in giving up our fisheries to the Canadians, our iron industries to England and our sheep ranches to Brazil, it can well afford to go into the retirement to which it will be invited next November.

A Traveller correspondent who is journeying through New York State writes as follows: "The Harrison element runs high in this state and you need have no fear but that the Republicans will carry it by a large majority. The farmers are aroused and many of them have changed over.

Lieutenant Colonel W. P. Walton, a prominent silk importer, of New York, who voted and worked for Cleveland last campaign, says he shall vote and work for Harrison and Morton this time. Ethan Allen Doty, a prominent Brooklyn Mugwump, has also come out for the Republican ticket.

Hon. E. C. Burleigh, the republican candidate for Governor, is much pleased with his prospects. He receives hundreds of encouraging letters daily, and some of them are heartier than those from gentlemen who opposed his nomination. His letter of acceptance will soon be given to the public.

Window glass manufacturers say that if the Mills bill is enacted they will be obliged to shut off every blast in the country. They are barely able to keep the works going now, and if they are compelled to compete still more sharply with cheap European labor, American works must close or wages be materially reduced.

Mrs. Colonel Coppinger and two children arrived in Augusta, Friday evening, for the summer, and are stopping at her father's, Mr. Blaine's. The old colored cook, whom the Blaines have had so long, and who is well also from Washington. Things are getting in shape for the arrival of the distinguished gentleman and his family.

An enterprising member of the Massachusetts Press Association, which returned from its annual summer excursion a few days ago, canvassed his fellow travelers on the trip, with a view to their Presidential preferences, and obtained this result: Harrison, 64; Cleveland, 16. The Massachusetts editors appear to be for the most part remarkably level-headed men.

"I shall vote for General Harrison," said a prominent Freeman Democratic farmer at Farmington, Saturday, "and I know four other Democratic farmers who will vote with me in my town. The Mills bill is too much for us to swallow," he continued. A New Vineyard Democratic farmer expressed the same sentiments, and there will be lots just like them all over Franklin county, says the Lewiston Journal.

The New York Times, Dem., describes Gov. Hill as "a two-penny politician" and charges him with "paying his election expenses and rewarding his favorites with money filched from the city of New York." But the Times in 1883 said that Cleveland was "a very low-priced reformer," who "authorized the robbery of the public on a great scale," yet it found no difficulty in supporting him for the Presidency in 1884. It may be yet found smoothing Hill's Democracy in Maine so to be a grand demonstration, including a grand reception to Mr. Blaine who will be present. The exercises will occupy the afternoon and evening. Among the well known orators who will be present in addition to Mr. Blaine are Governor Porter of Indiana, and ex-Senator Warner Miller of New York. Hon. H. B. Cleaves of Portland has been invited to preside and has accepted. The State League of republican clubs will co-operate in making the affair a success, and there will be a large number of out of town clubs present. The rally will be under the auspices of the State committee, who are working hard in completing details.

WHEELING, W. Va., July 20. Morris Horkheimer, senior member of the firm of Horkheimer Bros., of this city, the largest wool dealers in the State, announces his intention to vote for Harrison and Morton. Mr. Horkheimer has for 25 years voted the Democratic ticket. He will not only vote for Harrison and Morton, but for Republican congressional and legislative tickets. He has no patience with the Democrats who want protection, and thank God for a Republican Senate to fall back on—and then vote for Democratic legislators who will vote for United States Senators.

Bernard Horkheimer, the other member of the firm, will also vote the Republican ticket. They say there are many Democratic farmers in the country from whom they buy wool who have changed with them. Similar changes have become so frequent here as to cause genuine dismay in the Democratic household, but none has created so much surprise as that of Mr. David R. Brooks, a prominent manufacturer and contractor, who was considered a reliable partisan of Cleveland. He personally fired 100 guns when Cleveland was nominated, but has been reflecting since, and he authorizes the announcement that he will vote for Harrison and Morton on the protection issue.

The Chicago Dynamite Plot.

According to the latest dispatches from Chicago the police of that city have unearthed a murderous conspiracy which, in the number of contemplated victims and cold hearted ferocity of detail, far surpasses every similar occurrence in our national history except the assassination plot by which Abraham Lincoln fell a victim to the bullet of Booth. The plot of the anarchists who were hanged last year were to be killed by dynamite, and many public buildings were to be blown up.

Luckily enough these men of fevered minds and ulcerated hearts, thus lost to all sense of humanity, have been arrested and the plot made harmless by the imprisonment of the leaders. It was known to the police long before the necessity of taking the action by which its details were made public. There is something in the nature of Americans and in the free air which Americans breathe which prevents even these inhuman wretches from succeeding with their murderous schemes.

Chicago has just passed through a great danger. It is enough to make the heart jump wildly to think that a great city has nearly been bereft of the leaders among its guardians of law and order, and left defenseless in the hands of their would be murderers. Let Chicago men now carefully stamp out the last traces of this vile plot, not by a hanging bee, as was suggested two years ago, but by that stern justice which metes out the legal penalty to the violator of law. In this way only can justice be done so as to warn others from similar attempts. [The Press.

The Mills Bill Passes the House.

The Mills bill passed the National House of Representatives Saturday, by a vote of 162 to 149.

One hundred and fifty-six Democrats, including Speaker Carlisle, voted for the bill, as did three of the four Independents and Messrs. Brower, of North Carolina, Fitch, of New York, and Nelson, of Minnesota, Republicans. The fourth Independent, Mr. Nichols, of North Carolina, who had the indorsement and support of the Republicans in his district, voted with the 144 Republicans, and so did Messrs. Bliss, Merriman and Greenman of New York, and Bowden, of Pennsylvania, Democrats. Mr. Randall was paired with Mr. Hogg. Mr. Foran was present and unpaired, but neither voted for nor against the bill. All the other Ohio Democrats voted for it, Mr. Wilkins included. The votes of Messrs. Brower and Nelson in favor of the bill surprised both sides. The final determination of the three New Yorkers to vote against it surprised the Democrats, who have understood that they either would not vote at all or would vote for the bill.

Free Whiskey.

The Democrats are not likely to realize large returns from their silly charge that the Republican party favors free whiskey, in the sense that the Democracy is a free rum party, and in provoking the issue in the House last week they were decidedly worsted. In the course of the debate Mr. Milliken denied the charge that the Republican party was a free whiskey party. The Republican party had only declared that, rather than have free trade and cheap labor to destroy the industries of the country, it would repeal internal taxes.

Mr. Gallinger of New Hampshire said that if the Republican party was for free whiskey, so was the Prohibition party and so was the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. He was in favor of the repeal of internal taxation rather than destroy the tariff laws. On that issue the Republican party proposed to go to the people of the country in November next, and on that issue it proposed to elect Harrison and Morton.

Mr. Cox, of New York, said his idea was to reduce the surplus in any way he could, either by reduction in the tariff or internal taxes, or both, and in reply to Mr. Taylor, of Ohio, he denied that the bill looked forward to free trade.

Mr. Milliken asked if Mr. Cox had read in the schedules 100 per cent. on rice and 82 per cent. on sugar.

Mr. Cox replied that he could not read in five minutes the taxes on four thousand articles.

Mr. Milliken declared that the Republican party said it would reduce the tax on whiskey rather than destroy the industries of the country. The gentlemen on the other side drew a parallel between free blankets and free whiskey. They did not state that the bill placed 56 articles on the free list which were produced north of Mason and Dixon's line. While they maintained an average of 75 per cent. on southern products.

Mr. Mason, of Illinois, said that the nervous anxiety of the gentlemen on the other side for fear the country might have free whiskey was very amusing to people who studied the history and habits of the Democrats. He advised the gentleman from New York (Cox) that if he did not want to lose the solid support he had in his own district he had better not state that the Republican party was in favor of free whiskey.

The deaf mutes of the country are organizing for Harrison and Morton, 40,000 of whom are forming themselves into political clubs for this fall's campaign. A large majority of them are for Harrison and Morton, and the Republican movement among them has been managed by J. F. J. Tresch and T. J. Lounsbury, who will, in a few weeks, start a paper called the Deaf-Mute Press. Mr. Tresch said that there are now over 100,000 deaf mutes in this country. He added:

I have been in correspondence with prominent Republican deaf mutes from Maine to California on the subject of the new paper, and have received much encouragement. We polled 31,000 votes for Blaine in 1884, and I have every reason to believe we shall give Harrison and Morton at least 40,000.

The new paper is to be circulated free of charge during the campaign. Last week a conference of deaf mutes was held in New York, at which arrangements were made for campaign work. There are 12,000 deaf mutes in the State, 3,000 of whom live in the city.

The Democrats say that far-reaching public questions at issue make the personal character of candidates comparatively unimportant. That view of it helps Cleveland, of course, but accepting it as true the New York Tribune pertinently remarks: "Mr. Cleveland's policy would equally ruin the country if he were of all men the ablest and the wisest in other respects. The policy which Mr. Harrison advocates, and with great clearness and force, would equally benefit sixty millions of people, and the hundreds of millions that are to come after them, though he were a less able or a less worthy man."

Mr. Archibald Linn, of Hartford, the only manufacturer of woolen shawls in Maine, and one of the best in the United States, will support Harrison and Morton this year. No man in Maine is better acquainted with the needs of the manufacturer than Mr. Linn. Mr. Linn has not heretofore acted with the Republicans for from Somerset county. He says: "I am of the opinion that the friends of the American system of protection are the right ones to regulate the tariff, and not its opponents, the Democrats."

Radburn C. Wells, of Athens, Ga., the representative of a syndicate of Georgia, Virginia and South Carolina capitalists who are to build a steel plant and blast furnace, is in Pittsburg. Mr. Wells says: "One year ago I became a Republican. I think Cleveland's message and the St. Louis platform will change the majority in at least one Southern State. There is more truth in the breaking up of the solid South than most Northern people believe. The Democratic attitude on the tariff has caused much hard feeling in the South."

The "old boys" will be interested in Mr. Williamson's valuable paper on "Belfast Academy Fifty Years Ago," published on the first page. The writer was among those who attended the old Academy—when not otherwise engaged in witnessing launchings, fishing from the bridge or bathing at Black Rocks—a little later on, and is glad to have this record of the earlier occupants of the desks and seats.

We are ready to wager a big apple that Mr. Blaine's welcome home will exceed any similar demonstration ever known in this country. The American people are true to Blaine, and he is true to them.

Sunset Cox is contributing to the final sunset of the Democracy by his free trade speeches, but he is to be commended for calling a spade a spade. No revenue reform nonsense about him.

A train on the Maine Central ran off the track near Bath on Saturday morning. No one was hurt although the passengers were badly shaken up. Governor Marble was on the train.

Workingmen, Consider This.

After all the beauties of Free-Trade, as portrayed by the ablest advocates, there is one glaring fact which they cannot gainsay, which is a full answer to all their sophistries. Workingmen from all parts of the world persist in coming to this country of a Protective Tariff for better wages and better living, while no American dreams of quitting the United States for a similar reason.

With our Protective Tariff abolished, and the product of the cheaper labor of other countries admitted free, it is certain that the wages paid in Europe, in Asia, in India and in China would inevitably regulate the wages in this country. These are facts which no Free-Trader can gainsay or controvert. Free-Trade is fatal to the wage-worker, but clover to the capitalist. It is death to the manufacturer, but wealth and prosperity to the merchant importer. [Tariff League Bulletin.

The Boston Herald in a recent editorial summed up the political outlook in the four doubtful states of Indiana, New Jersey, New York and Connecticut, and arrived at the conclusion that the Republicans stood the best chance of carrying them. The Herald is a so-called Independent paper, but is an out-and-out Cleveland organ, and would not give currency to the above statement unless the case was a strong one. In a later article, reviewing the former, it concludes as follows:

In stating the present aspect of the political campaign, we find it a duty to say that the Republicans have thus far centered upon it with more earnestness and activity than the Democrats, and that there is nothing in the aspect of the doubtful states to lead one to believe that the Democrats are yet sure of enough of them to make the election of their President certain. But we say it not looking through Republican spectacles; nor through Democratic ones. It is a view taken in the light of indications as they appear to us, without bias in either direction.

A lively scene was enacted in the House of Representatives on Friday, while a bill was being considered to appropriate $250,000 for the support of a State Soldiers Home. Kilgore, an ex-confederate from Texas, denounced those old veterans, who by reason of disability and disease, are unable to take care of themselves, as "paupers." Gen. Spinola, of New York, jumped to his feet and exclaimed: "I deny it. The soldiers of the Union are no paupers, and I hurl that declaration back into the dirty threat from which it came." It looked squally for a time, but the friends of both prevented further personal altercation. Nothing so exasperates a Southern Democrat like any allusion to pensions.

Mr. Milliken has recently secured the passage of bills pensioning Mrs. Keziah G. Strong of Gardiner and Sarah F. Jones, whose husbands died on account of their services in the Union army. These are the last of all the cases on the calendar of which Mr. Milliken has had the care, and very few of the many claims sent to him by his constituents were unfavorably reported by the Committee on invalid pensions. Mr. Milliken's success in this respect has been due to the diligence and persistence with which he has looked after the pension claims committed to his care.

Mr. Blaine will sail from Europe Aug. 1 on steamer City of New York, and arrive at New York Aug. 7th or 8th, and will be welcomed by a grand demonstration.

THIRTY BRAVE SEAMEN GO DOWN TO DEATH.

The steamship Fulda which arrived at New York July 17, from Bremen, ran down an unknown fishing schooner on the Banks of Newfoundland the preceding Saturday morning. A dense fog prevailed at the time, and the schooner disappeared astern almost immediately after the collision.

At the time of the collision the schooner's entire crew, apparently numbering about thirty men, were on deck clinging to the rigging, uttering cries for help. Their vessel seemed to those on the steamer to be rapidly sinking. The air was filled with frantic shouts, which caused all the passengers of the Fulda to leave the breakfast table and rush excitedly to the deck.

The scene that followed beggars description. The hardy fishermen who wore red shirts and red caps, loudly shouted the "Ava Maria," while some of them endeavored to climb up the steamer's side, but slipped back into the water before assistance could be given them. While the steamer swept through the schooner, 20 to 30 of the fishermen could be seen rushing from the cabin to the deck of the sinking schooner.

They sprang into the rigging, vainly endeavoring to escape an almost inevitable doom. Before the agonizing eyes of the Fulda's passengers, amid the plaintive cadences of the poor fishermen's "Ave Maria," the little schooner, now cut in two with its heroic crew clinging to the rigging, suddenly disappeared.

It cannot be said whether the whole band of fishermen perished. Capt. Ring immediately turned around and for over an hour searched for the wreck and its victims. The fog, still dense and thick, compelled the abandonment of them, and reluctantly the officers of the Fulda resumed their voyage.

The officers said the wrecked fishing smack was a large two masted schooner of the regulation style of the bank schooner. As far as could be observed, she carried 16 dories, which were hoisted on her decks when she was struck. Her sails were furled and only the lookout and several other men were on deck.

The fate of the men is unknown. It may be that they were rescued by some other fishing schooner, for Capt. Ring says, judging from the peals of fog-horns which he heard when searching for the men, he concluded that he was in the midst of an immense fleet of fishing smacks. The disaster occasioned universal sorrow aboard the steamer, but the officers say that they are not responsible, as every precaution was observed.

DIRIGO BUSINESS COLLEGE. We have received from Prof. R. B. Capen, principal, a catalogue of students in the Dirigo Business College and Telegraph Institute, for the school year 1887-8, and a prospectus for the next year. This college is located at Augusta, and takes high rank among the educational institutions in the State. From a personal acquaintance with Prof. Capen we know the college to be first class, and have no hesitation in recommending pupils to enter. By looking over a list of students we notice more Waldo county names than formerly. The following attended during the year—Belfast: Vincent E. Beckwith, Herbert E. Brier, John W. Mitchell and Tolford E. Young; Burnham: Edward P. and William P. Sullivan and Albro H. Millett; Liberty: Preston E. Boynton and Linwood L. Gove; Palermo: Willard Hanson; Thorndike: Chas. F. Higgins; Knox: Will A. Lord. The next term begins Sept. 17th.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING. The tempest of Tuesday afternoon was quite severe in portions of Waldo county, particularly in Belmont. A lightning bolt entered the barn of Mr. James Moores at East Belmont and prostrated Mr. M. and his son William, as well as injuring a lady in the house. In the forenoon Mr. Moores came to Belfast to meet a daughter who came in on the boat. They arrived home just as the rain began to fall. Mr. Moores went to the barn to unharness the horse, his son William following. Mr. M. was in the tie up, William standing in the barn floor. The bolt entered the open door and went out through the barn, ripping off boards and doing more or less damage. Both men were knocked down and remained unconscious for a long time. Being unable to resuscitate them Dr. Kilgore, of Belfast, was called. When he arrived both men were up, and are now recovering from the shock. The young man, William, arrived home a few weeks ago after an absence of twenty five years....Mrs. O. A. Cammett, in another part of the town, was also prostrated by lightning.

Mrs. Martha Ellis, wife of Dr. James C. White, of Boston, died suddenly at Auburndale, on Friday. Dr. White is a son of the late James P. White, of this city.

CHURCH NOTES. The Universalist church will be closed during the month of August. The monthly collection for August will be taken next Sunday... Rev. Geo. E. Tutts will preach at North port next Sunday afternoon at two o'clock..... The Congregationalist society, of this city, has granted a four weeks vacation to the pastor, Rev. R. T. Hack....Rev. I. W. Burrows of East Knox, will conduct quarterly meeting services at the Methodist church next Sunday....Mr. Marggrat of Tufts College, will preach at the Universalist church Sunday morning, July 29th.

KNOX. Rev. B. C. Wentworth of Belfast, will conduct quarterly meeting services at East Knox next Sunday at 10:30 A. M. and at Morrill at 2 P. M.

JACKSON. The wet weather of two weeks past has been very unfavorable for curing hay; but, at the same time, has very largely increased the crop and it is now thought by the majority of our farmers that the yield of hay will equal, if not exceed, that of last year. The heavy shower at 2 o'clock Monday p. m. caught a large quantity of hay in the best position to get thoroughly sprinkled..... Miss Hannah Shibles, employed in Rev. D. Brackett's test shop, was thrown from a carriage dislocating her ankle.....Mr. and Mrs. Turner Hatch, of Lewiston, and Miss Erla Higgins are the guests of Mr. Amos Hatch....Frank Webber has put out a fine Republican campaign flag bearing the names of Harrison and Morton, also of E. C. Burleigh.

HURRICANE. Last week we gave an account of the loss of Sch. Clara, of St. John, N. B., which struck on a ledge near Little Hurricane Island. The following is the rough experience of the crew in making their escape from the wreck: "Their first attempt to escape was in a small boat, which was capsized, spilling them into the water. They managed with difficulty to get back to the schooner. They then made a raft of the vessel's hatches and other material at hand, and attempted to escape on that, but the raft was quickly washed to pieces, and they again succeeded in getting back to the schooner by means of life lines. There then seemed no way of escape, the sea running very high, but fortunately the mainmast gave way, and fell toward the shore in such a way as to afford them a perilous passage to the island. The vessel sank immediately after the escape of the last man. The captain and men were taken from the island the next day by the steamer Hurricane."

SWANVILLE. J. H. Lane and wife and daughter Lizzie, Miss Lucia W. Edwards, of Searsport, Me., and Miss Lucia W. Eames of Ashland, Mass., have been at "Lakeside" cottage for the past week..... E. B. Sheldon and family have been at their cottage, Union Lodge, for nearly two weeks..... Rev. F. H. Osgood and family of Bangor, are spending a few weeks at "Pioneer" cottage. Mr. Osgood was formerly pastor of the Methodist church at Searsport, and is now Presiding Elder of Bangor District. He will be present at the Swanville Union Sabbath school next Sunday, and is expected to make some remarks at the close of the school... Miss Josie I. Gilmore, of Worcester, Mass., is in town visiting friends.....Mrs. Maria Spinney, of Salem, Mass., is visiting at John Royal's..... Miss Susie Bachelder is visiting her mother, Mrs. Eunice Bachelder... James L. Colcord, of Belmont, is in town assisting his son Amos M., in getting the hay on the place formerly owned by himself.... Miss Nellie Greeley arrived home from Charlestown, Mass., last week... The Ladies' Aid Society will meet with Mrs. Maria Stevens, Aug. 2.... E. H. Nickerson sold last week to J. T. Shute & Co., Stockton, nine head of beef cattle.

BURNHAM. There was a dance in the picnic grove last Saturday night, with a very good attendance. There will be a dance on Saturday night July 28th. Music by Messrs. Berry and Brown. All are invited... The farmers are having a hard time getting their hay on account of bad weather. ....The three Weed girls arrived home from Boston Sunday morning. They will spend the summer with their father, Mr. Wm. Weed. Miss A. I. Weed has not been at home before for three years. Miss Weed is an obstetric nurse of some merit. In 1885 she was selected by the Superintendent of the Bureau of Nurses of Boston, to fill a vacancy in Cincinnati. While there Miss Weed formed the acquaintance of Miss Virginia Sorrella Brown. When Miss W. left Cincinnati she invited Miss B. to visit her some time in the East, and this summer Miss B. availed herself of the opportunity and is now with the Weed family in Burnham. When asked what she thought of Burnham Miss Brown said: "I have traveled through Kentucky, West Virginia, Delaware, New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, and a part of New Hampshire and Maine, and I have never seen anything more beautiful than Winnecook Lake and its surroundings." ... Mr. Arno Brown, of Portland, is spending a few weeks at the Dodge House.... Mr. Seldon Sterling is spending his vacation with his wife's father, Mr. Bradford Dodge....H. H. Weed and wife caught one hundred white perch in less than two hours one day last week.

WINTERPORT. A very sensational story with many horrible details, in regard to a man having been buried alive, which was supposed to refer to the late Fred Parker, has been going the rounds of the papers, but we are authorized to say that there is no foundation whatever for such a rumor. The body was disinterred on the day following the funeral, in order to bury it in another lot, and it was found in precisely the same condition as before burial..... A society of "Willing Workers" has been formed among the children of the Methodist Sunday School which meets on Saturday afternoons at the vestry.... One person was baptized and two received into the M. E. church on Sunday July 8th.... About 250 members of the Bangor and Brewer Sunday schools made a short stop at this place on their way home from an excursion down the river one day last week.... Misses Lillie and Emma Hardy are spending a few weeks at The Bluffs .... Mrs. Carrie Kilburn arrived from Woonsocket, R. I., on Thursday and is stopping at Mrs. C. M. Chase's ... Mrs. Chase, who has been very sick, is slowly improving ....Mr. Wm. White, of Portland, engineer of the corn factory, has arrived in town with his family and is occupying the Howard house....Mrs. Eaton, wife of the popular purser of the Katahdin, with her two children, has been visiting at Capt. Havener's.... Mrs. A. H. Hanscom, in company with a party of friends, is spending a few weeks at Bar Harbor.....Mrs. Crocker has returned from Jonesport where she has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Geo. Mansfield... Mrs. Allston Ellis with her infant daughter has been visiting her mother at Sandy Point. ....Mr. John Foote, of the firm of Lewis & Cohen, of Boston, was the guest of J. H. Thayer last week..... Mrs. B. M. Hewey, of Somerville, is visiting her father Mr. Hiram Smith..... Mr. S. W. Coffren now of Boston visited his old home last week.... Miss Nettie Hincks of Bangor is the guest of Hon. Fred Atwood....The Catholic Society made a very pleasant excursion down river on Wednesday of last week .....Miss L. A. Grindle has returned from Rockport where she has been spending the last two months ...Mrs. Bittenger of Chicago has been visiting her daughter Mrs. Walter Haley....Master Welcher Rich of Boston is spending his vacation in town..... Mrs. E. P. Curtis is visiting friends here....Mr. Joseph Treat and family of Chelsea, Mass., and Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler of Boston are stopping at Miss Nancy Merrill's....There have been three new arrivals in town recently—not summer visitors but permanent citizens. They are stopping at the respective homes of Elmer Larrabee, Wm. Arey and Charles Nason. All boys. Congratulations are the order of the day.

BUCKSPORT. We have to record the death of Mr. S. P. Hall, who died very suddenly Monday afternoon of paralysis, at the age of seventy-three years and seven months. Mr. Hall was a native of Belfast, but came here about fifty years ago and engaged in the banking business, connecting with it other mercantile enterprises. At one time he was largely interested in navigation being agent for a large number of vessels. The decline in the shipping business caused him to suffers with others financially, and a few years ago he retired from mercantile life, being succeeded by his son S. E. Hall at the store on Main street. Mr. H. enjoyed the confidence of all associated with him in his long business career of half a century..... There was an excursion from Hampden to Verona Park Tuesday on the little steamer Annie. ..A new addition to the dining hall at Verona Park has been made in order to enlarge the cooking apartments. Circulars giving information in regard to the coming camp meeting and accommodations can be had by addressing Verona Park Association in Bucksport..... Mrs. J. O. B. Darling, of Bangor, is visiting at D. W. C. Folsom's.... Mrs. Frank Widber, of Portland, is visiting at her father's, Hon. N. T. Hill's... Mrs. J. H. Douglass, of Gardiner, is visiting at Hon. Parker Spofford's....Harry L. Nevens, chief freight clerk on the Katahdin, was at home last Sunday. Harry's training here on the steamboat wharf under Mr. Patterson well fitted him for this honorable and trustworthy position. .....Mr. Frederick H. Moses and wife went to Bar Harbor Tuesday for the season. Miss Lizzie Snowman is left in charge of his office here.....

I am indebted to one of the party for the following description of the excursion to Hampden: One of the most delightful excursions of the season was enjoyed by the members of the Bucksport young peoples society of Christain Endeavor last Monday evening. In response to an invitation from the young people's society of Hampden, nearly forty of our members set sail about six p. m. in the new and fast steamer Annie, Capt. Atwood, to pay a fraternal visit to our up-river friends. The sail was most delightful, and a pleasanter party of young people it would be hard to find. Arriving at Hampden a little past eight, we at once proceeded to the Congregational church, where we were heartily welcomed by the pastor and members of the society. After spending an hour discussing the different methods of work among the young, a bountiful collation was served, and a delightful season of social intercourse was enjoyed. Before our departure a short devotional service was held, after which, we bad good-bye to our Hampden friends, and started on a most beautiful moonlight sail down the Penobscot, feeling that our visit had been one of great pleasure and profit to us all.

Searsport Locals.

Sch. Sallie P On, Capt. W. H. West, is loading ice at Bangor for Baltimore.

Miss Jennie McLellan, of Kansas City, Mo., has been visiting friends in town.

Sch. Lackawanna finished discharging a full cargo of coal for Lane, Tuesday night.

Capt. B. F. Pendleton and wife, of New York, are spending their vacation here.

Fred Field picked up a flat bottomed boat adrift near Long Cove ledge one day last week.

Bark Evie Reed, Capt. A. T. Whittier, made the passage to Sidney, N. S. W. from New York in 117 days.

Fred Rice who has not visited his old home for seven years arrived Friday. He has been residing in Grinnell, Iowa.

James A. Davis and Miss Etta Glidden of Boston, are guests of Dr. F. A. Davis and wife at the Searsport House.

John F. Carver, who is employed in Rust Bros. & Bird's wholesale drug store, Boston, is making a short visit in town.

The party of young people who went to Swan Lake, Monday, are enthusiastic in praise of Capt. Cunningham and steamer and their treatment at his hands.

Rev. J. E. Adams conducted services in the Roberts district last Sunday, and baptized twenty two candidates, nine by sprinkling and thirteen by immersion.

Among the arrivals this week are Wm. Merrill and wife, Miss Celia Nichols, Edward N. Quimby, Fred Hasson, Mrs. Charles Waterhouse and Miss Emma Barney.

Bugler Waterhouse, of the U. S. naval training ship New Hampshire, is at home for a short stay and will join his ship at Newport, R. I., at the end of his furlough.

Searsport has again beaten the record. This time, Capt. John G. Pendleton, in ship Henry B. Hyde, made the passage from San Francisco to New York in 88 days.

After an absence of thirty one years Mr. Henry L. Darling, now a resident of Portland, Oregon, made a visit to his old home. He was accompanied by his niece, Miss Capen, of Boston.

The Cong. Sunday school and parish will take their annual excursion by a ride to Sandy Point, to day (Thursday). If the weather should be stormy it will be postponed until next fair day.

Wm. R. Curtis and wife left for their home in Oregon Wednesday. They go out by the California excursion as far as Ogden, going up the Oregon short line. He secured tickets at very low rates of Mr. Black, our local agent.

Capt. C. F. Carver, who has taken command of ship St. Nicholas will be joined by his wife and daughter, who will make the voyage with him. They left by Morrill excursion for San Francisco Wednesday night.

Tug Bismarck, after an ineffectual attempt Wednesday night, came down again Tuesday afternoon, and with the increased tide succeeded in hauling off sch. F. Merwin which went ashore on Mack's Point several weeks ago.

We have at last solved the mystery of the mysterious diggers for hidden treasures recently seen on Bog Hill. They are no doubt following the lead we mentioned last spring as discovered by the old hen sold at one of the markets with a gold nugget in her crop.

In tracing Capt. Eben Curtis in the iron ship Tillie E. Starbuck we find the following extraordinary passages: New York to Portland, Oregon, 115 days, thence to Falmouth, Eng. 120 days. Havre to New York 20 days, thence to Calcutta 21 days, back to New York 54 days. New York to Hiogo, Japan, 114 days, the latter the quickest time ever made by a sailing ship from the United States or Europe.

Two ladies who drove up to one of the hotels in Belfast one afternoon this week during one of the heaviest showers were very much surprised and rather indignant that no assistance was offered them by the dozen or more men who had taken refuge under the piazza of the hotel from the rain. We endeavored to console them by the suggestion that probably all those gentlemen (?) attended Mrs. Wallace's lectures, and had learned to let the ladies have their rights.

Quite an excitement was created in town Saturday by the hoisting of the large safe recently purchased by the town, to the second story window of the Nichols block, where the selectmen's office is located. The usual crowd of loafers were assembled, and all having a different idea of the way in which the job could be easiest accomplished. Those having the matter in charge were very successful, however, and in a very short time placed the safe in the nook it is to occupy.

NORTHPORT. Among Mrs. Herrick's summer boarders at the Cove are Judge Spears, of the Supreme Court, and wife, of Columbus, Ohio, and Mr. and Mrs. Reed, of New York. Mrs. Herrick has sixteen visitors from Philadelphia, New York, Columbus and Boston.

VINALHAVEN. The following arrivals of fish are reported at Vinalhaven for the week ending July 19: Schooner Lettie Hopkins, 28,000 pounds; Esperenza, 25,000; Lena Young, 40,000; Urana S., 27,000; Star of Hope, 5000; Lizzie Bradley, 18,000; Barbelle, 5000; Frank Turner, 3000; John Gray, 2000; Clara Benner, 44,000; Mary Jane, 30,000; David Azier, 20,000; Henrietta Ames, 15,000; Ida Grover, 15,000; Flying Eagle, 15,000. Total, 270,000 pounds.

STOCKTON. Penobscot Lodge No. 87, I. O. of G. T., held a sociable in Denslow Hall this (Thursday) evening. All are cordially invited.... The strawberry festival given by the Universalist parish last week was quite a financial success....The dance in Denslow Hall Saturday evening was well attended—between 30 and 35 couples in attendance and a very pleasant time reported. There is to be another next Saturday and a larger company is expected.... Among the arrivals the past week are Mr. Willard Griffin of California, formerly of this place, Mrs. C. W. Frye and son of Boston, Mass., a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Berry, and twin boys to Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Griffin.....Miss Evie Berry is at home for a few weeks....A very pleasant surprise party was given Harry W. Griffin last Friday evening by his many friends in honor of his sixteenth birthday....Penobscot Lodge has an election of officers next Tuesday evening, July 31, and a full attendance is requested.

PROSPECT. The religious meetings continue interesting. The large choir of nearly fifty in a full meeting under the charge of Mr. Wm. F. Ellis and Capt. Parks has done good work. The number of conversions, increased spiritual work, practice of Christianity, good order and observance of Sunday and freedom from all things inconsistent with the proprieties of the day have been marked and specially noted in this section. The first pioneer Sunday school is sowing good seed among the young. All speak good words of encouragement to all of the young and old to continue in well doing and more wonderful works will follow. The ordinance of baptism was administered by Rev. J. E. Adams, of Bangor, to twenty-two candidates last Sunday. More than 1,500 people and 300 teams were on the ground ...On our way to the village we called at the Stockton Mineral Spring Company's works last week. The new machinery is now in and the first bottle of nerve tonic was put up Monday July 16th, and will be kept by the president of the company for historical purposes. The writer drank the first glass from the second bottle, wishing good luck and prosperity to the company. The company is now prepared to bottle aerated mineral water, soda water, ginger ale and mead, besides barrels and bottles of the water are sent now daily from the celebrated mineral spring, to all parts of the country. Mr. P. J. Maguire, agent for J. M. Tufts, of Boston, the celebrated manufacturer of all kinds of apparatus for fountains etc., for making soda, put in the machinery. ....Mrs. Margaret Keene from Billerica, Mass., is on a visit to her mother, Mrs. Margaret Mudgett, of Prospect....The County Grange meets with South Branch Grange, Prospect, the 21st of August. ....The Partridge reunion will be held in Orland, the 22d of August. The writer, chairman of the committee for the reunion last year, received letters from different parts of New England from people bearing the name. Letters addressed to Josiah Partridge, of Bucksport, Secretary, will be promptly answered and information given concerning ancestors, etc....Mrs. Annie Breed and daughter, of Lynn, Mass., and Mr. A. B. Whitten, of Monroe, visited Mrs. Melvina Crockett last week. ....Mrs. Abbie Morse, of Searsmont, will speak at Whitcomb's Hall in North Searsport, July 29th, at 2 P. M. All are invited.

That Tired Feeling

The warm weather has a debilitating effect, especially upon those who are within doors most of the time. The peculiar, yet common, complaint known as "that tired feeling," is the result. This feeling can be entirely overcome by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives new life and strength to all the functions of the body.

"I could not sleep; had no appetite. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and soon began to sleep soundly; could get up without that tired and languid feeling; and my appetite improved." R. A. SANFORD, Kent, Ohio.

Strengthen the System

Hood's Sarsaparilla is characterized by three peculiarities: 1st, the combination of remedial agents; 2d, the proportion; 3d, the process of securing the active medicinal qualities. The result is a medicine of unusual strength, effecting cures hitherto unknown. Send for book containing additional evidence.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla tones up my system, purifies my blood, sharpens my appetite, and seems to make me over." J. F. THOMPSON, Register of Deeds, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla beats all others, and is worth its weight in gold." E. BARRINGTON, 120 Bank Street, New York City.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Made only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Lowell, Mass.

SEARSMONT. Rev. S. H. Beal, of Camden, preached in the M. E. church last Sunday ...Miss Nora Harlow, of Lewiston, is visiting her parents. ....Lizzie True and Nettie Hazeltine are at Northport Camp ground ...Mr. W. A. Cushman is high line in the black bass fishing in Quantabacook. Tuesday he caught fourteen. The largest one weighed three pounds and the smallest nearly one pound. A. E. Jones was with him and had very good success.... Mrs. L. M. Poor and her son Walter have been visiting in town.

FRANKFORT. Mr. T. W. Benson has opened his ice cream saloon and is now prepared to furnish any number of creams at any time ...Everybody is haying now. The crop is reported as somewhat lighter than usual ...The most interesting thing in town at present is the erecting of the trestle for the elevated cable on Mt. Waldo. We imagine it will be quite a novelty to see a stone weighing from one to ten tons, eighty feet from the ground rushing down the side of a mountain. It is the first thing of the kind ever attempted in this part of the state and we look forward to its completion with interest.

SOUTH MONTVILLE. J. L. Simmons and Ira Simmons and wife of Waltham, Mass., arrived last week on a visit to their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Josiah Simmons ...C. T. Randall was thrown from his mowing machine last week and hurt his shoulder quite badly.....Miss Lillie Keen is at home on a visit, from the Waltham watch factory. ... Mrs. Mary Jackson, of Poor's Mills, returned home Saturday, after spending a few days here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Galen Keen and other relatives.....John F. Esaney has sold his horse to Will Martin to go in a livery stable at Rockland....C. V. Follett has been quite sick for a week, consequently his haying has been delayed. Most farmers here have finished, having secured a good crop of excellent hay.....Arthur Norton took a load of the boys to Augusta last Saturday. They also visited Hallowell, Gardiner and Togus, having a very pleasant time and enjoying them selves nicely ....Austin Wentworth has bought the Fowler place at Woodmans' Mills and rented it to Edward Sukeforth.

BROOKS. The bad weather of last week retarded haying business and the farmers are now very busy.....The late rains saved the hay crop and while it is now lighter than it should be, it is better than was expected in June... The woman killed last week by falling off a load of hay was Lavinda, wife of Jason Evans, better known here as Mrs. Mason.....The meetings of the "Young People's Association" have been very interesting and are well attended....Last Monday evening we enjoyed a rare treat in listening to J. W. Davis, of Waterville, who gave us a fine address and Bible reading. He will be ever welcome to a Brooks audience....Next Monday evening we expect the pleasure of listening to friend Eli Jones, of China, who almost everybody in Maine have seen or heard of. He is now really a remarkable old man and there will be a crowded house. He is expected to preach here Sunday the 29th. The meetings at the Quaker chapel have proved to be very interesting and have been well attended during the entire season. Sunday, Aug. 12, Rev. John Lemley, of Albany, N. Y., editor of Zion's Watchman, is expected to be present. A crowd will be in attendance. The Bible readings have been regularly held during the season at 4 o'clock each Sunday afternoon and during the week, and Mr. Sharpless has made them very interesting. He spoke last Sunday evening at the Grange Hall in Waldo....Rev. Mr. Lewis of the Bangor Theological School now preaches here alternate Sundays in the afternoon. His sermons are well prepared, well delivered, and much liked. Rev. Mr. Gould also preaches here every other Sunday, so we are well supplied with ministers and able ones too..... Political matters will grow interesting here soon. Dr. Billings has many friends here who have the highest confidence in his ability, and integrity, and who would like to see him in the Senate this winter. Among those spoken of as Representatives from this class are Chas. E. Lane, Isaac Reynolds, M. J. Dow and A. S. Forbes.

MONROE. Through a mistake the last week's items had it that Mrs. A. B. Stratford had a tumor removed from her side. Mrs. Webber had one removed and is doing as well as could be expected. Mrs. Stratford is in the enjoyment of her usual good health at present.....The public may like to know that the so-called Riley brook is not the exclusive property of Mr. Riley. In point of fact Mr. R. controls only a very small portion of the brook. Outside parties who come for a day's fishing will do well to remember that "plenty of whiskey and a wake" are not relished by the different owners of the land through which the brook runs ...Some one stole a pig from Mr. R. N. Colson last week, and when piggy was discovered the boys thought it would be a fine joke to steal him from the first culprit. The young porker was accordingly taken without warning and transported to another sty. The pig at one time escaped from his captors and tried to end his troubles by drowning himself in the mill pond. He would have succeeded had it not been for the courage of—(we know his name but won't tell it), who risked his own life to save that of the unhappy porker. It was all done for fun and it proved good sport for all but the pig, which was driven to the rashness of suicide....Mr. A. F. Brown has gone on a canvassing tour up river. He expects to be very successful in selling his water wheel among the millmen of Aroostook county. ...J. W. Robertson has a dog that is said to have killed more than a dozen woodchucks this summer —and yet some men want a tax on dogs and a bounty on woodchucks.....Ira E. Clark probably has the best thoroughbred Hereford bull in town. With beef on the rise, the low price of one dollar for service ought to induce the farmers to patronize this fine animal....We have it on good authority that a pair of deers were seen in this vicinity one day last week. They were seen in the pasture of Mr. Braley and took to the woods on the hill....The Republicans are talking of having a new flag in the village... Mr. F. A. Piper, who has been special pension examiner in Chattage, Missouri, has been recently reappointed.... The haying is about half done and the crop will fall short one-fourth from last year .. Mrs. Belle Palmer, with her daughters Lizzie and Josie, has gone to Massachusetts on a visit to her brother's.

The Starrett Family Reunion.

The ninth annual gathering of the descendants of Col. Thomas Starrett will be held at Reunion grove, on the farm of I. P. Starrett, in Warren, on Wednesday, August 22, 1888, if pleasant; otherwise, on the first pleasant day after. There will be the usual picnic dinner, the executive committee attending to the furnishing of the coffee, tea and sugar. There will be, after dinner, the customary exercises at the stand. Those residing at a distance are reminded that their presence imparts an especial interest to our gatherings, and that if unable to be present, letters from them, dealing in reminiscences of the past, or giving information as to present welfare, situation and surroundings, are of especial interest to those who do attend. Such letters may be addressed either to the president or the secretary. Those related to and bearing a common name with us, are always warmly welcomed to our gatherings.

L. F. STARRETT, President, Rockland.
I. P. STARRETT, Secretary, Warren.

Prohibition County Convention.

The legal voters of Waldo County, irrespective of party or party preference, who believe in the principles of Prohibition, the rights of labor, and the color line in politics forever wiped out, are requested to attend a County Convention to be holden at the Court House, in Belfast, on Saturday, the 4th day of August next, at 10 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of nominating candidates to the State Legislature and county offices, and to transact any other business that may come before the convention. During the afternoon the convention will be addressed by Hon. Volney B. Cushing, Prof. L. C. Bateman, Prof. F. W. Gowen and others. Every active Prohibitionist in the county is expected to be present. Don't fail to do so.

Per order Prohibition County Committee.
CAPT. A. E. CLARK, Chairman.
REV. B. C. WENTWORTH, Secretary.
Belfast, July 23, 1888.

Examination of Candidates for a Cadetship at West Point.

There will be a competitive examination at Colby University on the 4th day of September, 1888, of candidates for appointment as cadet at the U. S. Military School at West Point, and one alternate. Candidates must be unmarried, at least five feet in height, free from disease and deformity, well versed in reading and writing including orthography, and in arithmetic, and have a knowledge of the elements of grammar, descriptive geography and the history of the United States. They must be between the ages of seventeen and twenty two years at the time of admission to the Academy.

Campaign Songs.

HARRISON AND MORTON.

[Written for the New York Press, and adapted to the old tune "Tippecanoe and Tyler, too."]

BY LUDLOW PATTON.

1.
Oh, what has caused this great commotion,
Motion, motion, our country through?
For all around we hear the call,
For Tippecanoe and Morton, too.
For Tippecanoe and Morton, too.
And with them we'll beat Cleveland,
Land, land, with vote in hand.
And with them we'll beat Cleveland.

2.
Protection unto man and trade,
Trade, trade, our country through;
To carry it out we'll vote and shout
For Tippecanoe and Morton, too.
For Tippecanoe and Morton, too.
And with them we'll beat Cleveland,
Land, land, with vote in hand.
And with them we'll beat Cleveland.

3.
Free trade won't pay our national debt,
Debt, debt, when it is due;
A protective tariff will settle it all,
Under Tippecanoe and Morton, too.
Under Tippecanoe and Morton, too.
We'll pay every dollar we owe,
Owe, owe, to friend or foe.
We'll pay every dollar we owe.

4.
We welcome here the honest farmers,
Farmers, farmers, mechanics and all,
To roll along the Republican ball,
The Republican ball that conquers all,
The Republican ball that conquers all;
And with it we'll marshall the free,
Free, free, o'er land and sea.
And with it we'll marshall the free.

5.
We want a fair count and an honest vote,
Vote, vote, all over the land;
It's what we demand, and we'll take our stand
With Tippecanoe and Morton, too,
With Tippecanoe and Morton, too.
And that's just the thing we'll do,
Do, do, our country through.
We'll vote for Tippecanoe.

"THERE'S NO USE O' KNOCKING AT THE DOOR."

Air, "Maryland, My Maryland."

Free trade is knocking at thy door,
Uncle Sam!
She never knocked so hard before,
Uncle Sam!
And flies above her saucy head
The sign by which her steps are led.
An old bandanna, bloody red,
Uncle Sam! My Uncle Sam!

O, it would be a shame and sin,
Uncle Sam!
To ope the door and let her in,
Uncle Sam!
From East far on to Western shore,
The hosts of labor loud implore
Thou wilt keep shut the free-trade door,
Uncle Sam! My Uncle Sam!

John Bull emits a fearful groan,
Uncle Sam;
Protection he will ne'er condone,
Uncle Sam!
He loathes protection tire and hub,
It pains his pocket, there's the rub—
Go interview the Cobden Club,
Uncle Sam! My Uncle Sam!

When cunning Bourbon leaders claim,
Uncle Sam!
Free trade is really not their aim,
Uncle Sam!
Just whisper soft in Grover C.,
Small difference is discerned by thee
Twixt tweedledum and tweedledee,
Uncle Sam! My Uncle Sam!

Well thou wilt guard the country's weal,
Uncle Sam!
Her foes shall be beneath thy heel,
Uncle Sam!
Fierce let the Bourbons rage and roar,
While England cries, "Encore, encore,"
Thou wilt not open the free-trade door,
Uncle Sam! My Uncle Sam!

"I Fights mit Sigel."

I met him one morn, he was trudging along,
His knapsack with chickens was swelling,
He'd "blenkered" these dainties, and thought it no wrong,
From some Secessionist's dwelling.
"What regiment's yours? and under whose flag
Do you fight?" said I, touching his shoulder.
Turning slowly around he smilingly said
(For the thought made him stronger and bolder),
"I fights mit Sigel."

The next time I saw him his knapsack was gone,
His cap and his canteen were missing;
Shell, shrapnell and grape, and the swift rifle ball,
Around him and o'er him were hissing.
"How are you my friend, and where have you been,
And for what, and for whom are you fighting?"
He said, as a shell from the enemy's gun
Sent his arm and his musket a-kiting,
"I fights mit Sigel."

And once more I saw him and knelt by his side,
His life blood was rapidly flowing;
I whispered of home, wife, children and friends,
And the bright land to which he was going.
"And have you no word for the dear ones at home,
For the wife one, the father or mother,"
"Yaw, yaw," said he, "tell them, oh tell them,"—(quite done Poor fellow! he thought of no other.)—
"I fights mit Sigel."

We scooped out a grave and he dreamlessly sleeps
On the banks of the Shenandore river;
His home and his kindred alike are unknown,
His reward in the hands of the Giver.
We placed a rough board at the head of his grave,
"And we left him alone in his glory."
But on it we marked ere we turned from the spot,
The little we know of his story—
"I fights mit Sigel."

Some Features of Chautauqua.

A COMPLICATED MACHINE—FINE ARRAY OF NAMES IN THE COLLEGE FACULTY—STORIES TOLD IN THE SYLVAN SHADES.

Correspondence of the Journal.

Chautauqua, N. Y., July 16.—The Chautauqua season is well under way in its second week's work. The working features are the more conspicuous ones in July. The 17 departments and 75 classes of the college of Liberal Arts, with their 31 professors from Yale, Amherst and other universities; the Teachers' Retreat, with its ten subdivisions of classes and work; the college of music; the Society of Fine Arts; the School of Elocution and Oratory; the Business College; Department of Physical Training; Kindergarten—the bare enumeration of the departments and classes is formidable and really conveys no adequate conception of the extent, ramification and versatility of the work here to one who has never visited the place. Nay, it is universal experience that at first one is confused and distressed by the multiplicity of working interests, and few rarely "catch on" to the Chautauqua program in one season. How then can anyone be surprised if people at a distance do not fully comprehend it?

If the managers please I think they have in past years taken too much for granted in the way of popular comprehension of the Chautauqua idea and acquaintance with its applications and outworkings. Hence, they have not until lately taken sufficient pains to minutely, patiently and simply educate the public regarding this complicated machine with which its constructors and operators are so familiar. But lately more attention has been paid to advertising the features of Chautauqua, and keeping the press informed of its operations. The plan devised by the undersigned five years ago has at last been set in operation, and the press of the entire country is weekly furnished bulletins of work here by the

CHAUTAUQUA CORRESPONDENCE BUREAU.

This work is in the hands of independent, competent and well informed writers; their work is not revised by the manager of Chautauqua, though the writing is in a friendly spirit. The object is to furnish facts, information about this world wide movement which thousands in every land are so eager to learn.

THE COLLEGE OF LIBERAL ARTS

is the central department of work now in operation. This is one college of the Chautauqua University. It will be remembered that this university is chartered by act of the legislature of New York and empowered to confer degrees. To qualify students for such honors its work is two fold, viz: 1. correspondence between the faculty and study by students in their respective homes during nine months of the year: 2. Six weeks of personal instruction in a condensed curriculum under high pressure. The instructors engaged in this work number over thirty and include such professors eminent in pedagogics as Prof. Herbert B. Adams and Prof. Richard T. Ely of Johns Hopkins university, Prof. George S. Burroughs of Amherst college, Prof. Marcus D. Buell of Boston university, Prof. Wm. R. Harper of Yale, Prof. A. H. Edgren of the University of Nebraska, and Prof. Noah K. Davis of the University of Virginia.

THE HUMAN ELEMENT.

But all is not given up to work and "culchaw" here. There is plenty of the dolce far niente, the mere pleasure-seeking; and a vast deal of rehearsing for that greatest of all dramas in which only two are in the cast and the interest in which never ceases or abates. At least I confess to more interest in the flirtations and deeper relations to be seen in the sylvan shades of Chautauqua than in the pursuit of knowledge in the academic groves of the College of Liberal Arts. "The same old story is told" at all hours in the day here and I pity the fellow who is so old, cold and blase as not to sympathize with the infatuations of young men when he sees the bloom and freshness and beauty that invisibly but irresistibly draw them at Chautauqua. COLEMAN E. BISHOP.

Mr. Pierce Kane, a prominent manufacturer of Albany, says:

"I have never voted anything but the Democratic ticket. If I live till next election day I will vote for Harrison and Morton. I employ 150 or more operatives. I never interfere with the politics of my men, but it is my belief, from the expressions I have heard, that 75 or 80 per cent. of them will vote the Republican ticket next fall. I am a protectionist. You may call me a Republican, or anything else you please. But I am voting for Kane!"

And there are hundreds of Democratic manufacturers and business men and thousands of workingmen who, like Mr. Kane and his employes, have no longer any use for a Democratic ticket. No party which is suffering such a loss as the free trade Democracy is now can afford to make light of it. [Boston Journal.

Literary News and Notes.

Dr. Holmes is to contribute to the English "Dictionary of Americanism" a list of words on the folk-lore and superstitions of Massachusetts.

The third volume of Prof. McMaster's "History of the People of the United States" is growing, and the author expects to deliver the manuscript to the printers at the end of this year.

The July number of Belford's Magazine has been received. Gertrude Garrison contributes the complete novel, "The Wrong Man." Don Piatt, the editor, writes in his usual vigorous and racy way of public men, and the short stories are meritorious.

"The Injurious Influences of City Life" is the subject of a brief but striking paper, by Walter B. Platt, M. D., to appear in the August Popular Science Monthly. The limitation of muscular movements, the noise, and the pavements in a city, are the principal sources of the effects to which he refers.

Medical Classics is the name of a bi-monthly edited by Ferdinand Seeger, M. D., and John McMullen, A. M., and published at 38 Murray street, New York. It is both interesting and instructive in its contents, dealing with sanitary and household affairs as well as with medical matters. The current issue is particularly good.

Prof. Charles F. Richardson of Dartmouth College will spend the summer at Cape Elizabeth, and is engaged upon the final revision of the proofs of the second volume of his "History of American Literature"—one of the most elaborate and scholarly works ever written by a Maine author. Prof. Richardson is a native of Hallowell, a nephew of Mr. Wingate of the firm of Leigh & Wingate.

The temperature of the dog-days has had no depressing effect on the conductors of Harper's Magazine. The Number for August is as fresh and vigorous as May or early June. Most of the staff of well-known contributors are represented in its pages, with here and there a new name. From an artistic point of view, there is no chance for fault-finding. Abbey, Parsons, and Thulstrup furnish some of their best work. In fiction many strong chapters are offered, while the supply of solid reading is in no way diminished. The frontispiece is a haymaking scene by Abbey, drawn to illustrate the old rhyme about "The Leather Bottel."

The August Century will be issued on the first day of the month as usual, in spite of the fire which did such serious damage to the editorial and business offices of the magazine. The contents of this issue—the Midsummer Holiday Number—will include an account of Mr. George Kennan's first meeting with political exiles in Siberia. Readers of this series of articles on Siberia will be interested in a biographical sketch of Mr. Kennan (with portrait), in this number, written by Miss Anna Laurens Dawes, a daughter of Senator Dawes, in which will be explained Mr. Kennan's peculiar fitness for his task, his previous knowledge of Russian affairs, etc.

The August number of the Forum will complete the fifth volume; and during the two years and a half covered by these volumes both sides of every subject of great public concern have been treated in its pages by leaders of opinion. The list of contributors contains the names of more than 250 of the foremost writers in America, England and France. Beginning with the sixth volume a new feature will be added to the Forum (which is also new in our periodical literature). Every number will contain a signed article of literary criticism, reviewing the most important recent books in the several great departments of thought, and every writer will be a recognized authority in his department.

"Peterson's Magazine" for August begins "A London Success," by the author of "A Transplanted Rose." To judge from the opening chapters, this serial will prove fully equal to that novel, that made such a decided hit several years ago. Miss Elizabeth Robinson Scovil's article on "The Care of Children in Infectious Diseases" is in her best style; and as a writer on such subjects, she has few equals, either in this country of England. As usual, in the matter of illustrations, "Peterson" is unsurpassed. Every woman will want this number, if only to secure the beautiful steel-engraving, "Good-Bye, Papa." The large colored fashion-plate, which is a specialty of "Peterson," gives numerous designs for summer costumes. The number is rich in patterns for ladies' and children's dresses, fancy articles, and other sorts of needlework—in fact, everything the heart of woman can desire.

The numbers of The Living age for July 7th and 14th contains The Sunday Question, and Matthew Arnold, Contemporary; Goethe, and The Cloister in Cathay, Fortnightly; The Patriotism of a Hereditary Peerage, National; Correspondence of Sir Henry Taylor, Blackwood; Some Ideas of Schopenhauer, Gentleman's; The Letters of Charles Lamb, and A Brother of the Common Life, Macmilian; A Poet of Prose, Some Recollections of Bishop Wilberforce, and Health-Resort Vignettes, Temple Bar; The Empress Victoria of Germany, Argosy; Vagaries of Speech, and A Religious Revolution in Japan, Spectator; Do Birds Transport Each Other Through the Air? Mr Brother Henry, and the Lake City of Borneo, St. James's; The Scientific Writings of Joseph Henry, Nature; Sledging through Siberia, Graphic; Fatal Result of Morphia-Taking, Lancet; with instalments of "The Eavesdropper," and poetry.

The new number of Ticknor's admirable Paper Series of Original Copyright Novels is "The Rise of Silas Lapham," one of the latest works of the prince of American novelists, W. D. Howells. Many critics rank this as his greatest and most impressive work, and the crowning triumph of the school of realism in American literature. No serial since George Eliot's "Daniel Deronda," called forth so much discussion as did "Silas Lapham," during its serial publication in The Century Magazine: and it was easily the most-talked-of novel of the last ten years. It is a story for men, for business men as well as for women, and has been as much discussed in banks as in boudoirs. "The Rise of Silas Lapham" is a noble and vivid work, with rare flashes of modern humor, and frequent episodes of amazing pathos. It is the fortieth volume of Ticknor's Paper Series, which has been one of the greatest successes in the American publishing trade.

Democracy Means Free Trade.

There is another term in which we speak of England as a free-trade country. They adopt the policy of liberalizing their commerce. Others suggest that a free-trade country is a country where a tariff is levied for revenue only, and where commerce is liberalized as far as it can be liberalized consistently with the collection of the necessary revenue for the support of government. If that is what the Senator means by free trade, then I am a free-trader, and I take it that most of the Senators on this side of the Chamber are free-traders of this kind; that is, free-traders in the sense of simply levying duties enough to furnish revenues for the support of the government economically expended. [Senator Reagan, Democrat, of Texas, Senate debate, July 11.

This is definite and satisfactory. While Speaker Carlisle, Premier Mills, Mayor Hewitt and Governor Hill have been trying to pull the wool over people's eyes in this strong protection State, the Senator calls himself and his colleagues free-traders and then defines the term with precision. He wants a tariff for revenue only, without protection of any industry or class. That is his idea of free trade, and in his judgment nearly all his colleagues are free-traders in that sense.

But our present tariff laws, the vicious, inequitable, and illogical source of unnecessary taxation, ought to be at once revised and amended. These laws, as their primary and plain object, raise the price to consumers of all articles imported and subject to duty, by precisely the sum paid for such duties. Thus the amount of the duty measures the tax paid by those who purchase for use these imported articles. [President Cleveland's Message.

Those three sentences show that the President is a free-trader, and has no sympathy with a protective tariff. "Vicious," "inequitable," "illogical" are not words which any friend of American industry will apply to the tariff. The assertion that the amount of duty measures the precise increase of price of the article for the consumer is one of the wildest examples of free-trade dogmatism.

Of course, England may subsidize lines of ships to open up new markets for her surplus, because she freely exchanges commodities with such markets; and her policy is after establishing the commerce to steadily decrease the subsidy. If the policy of giving bounties to promote commercial relations with other countries be ever adopted again after the failures in our history, it would seem that its adoption should be deferred until closer commercial relations with those countries can be maintained and are not antagonized by an opposing system of laws. [Postmaster-General Dickinson to Representative Blount.

This is the Administration's ultimatum to the American steamship lines: "You will get nothing from the Democratic party beyond freight charges for mail carriage until we have free trade. England subsidizes its lines, but that is proper enough. England has free trade; when we have free trade here it will be time to deal generously with the American lines."

Is it good policy to close our markets against the world? If so, is it not good policy for them to close their markets against us? Can we sell to everybody and buy from nobody?—[Senator Beck, Dem., Kentucky. Debate June 11.

That is the precise manner of Professor Sumner and the free-trade Professors at nearly every American college. Senator Beck has been a free-trader from way back, and never tries to conceal his meaning nor to alter the conventional phrases and stock arguments of the free-trade school. [New York Tribune.

A peculiarity of Hood's Sarsaparilla is that while it purifies the blood, it imparts new vigor to every function of the body.

"Transplant one fourth of the smells of Rome to New York for a day," says an American tourist, "and you would start a plague which would sweep a million people out of existence. The Italians grow fat on them."

Ladies who Bloat.

What a great number there are; how uncomfortable it makes them; it is almost impossible for those afflicted to enjoy life. In my private practice I have always found Sulphur Bitters to be the best remedy. All who are thus troubled should use it.

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO EXHIBITORS.

For any information concerning the Fair of 1888, address Secretary Eastern Maine State Fair, Bangor, Me.

Blanks for making entries furnished promptly on application. Entries of live stock must be made on or before Saturday, August 18th, as the entries will positively close on that day. This rule is imperative.

Entries of other articles close Monday, August 27th, 1888. Exhibitors are requested to give as early notice as possible of their intentions to make entries, naming the articles to be exhibited, space required, etc.

A large amount in cash is offered in premiums for live stock at this Fair, for the purpose of encouraging exhibitors and breeders to show their skill in the production of fine animals, to create a healthy competition in the different breeds, call out a large and valuable exhibition of superior animals, that the patrons of the Fair may have an opportunity of examining and comparing their relative values and become better acquainted with the different characteristics of the several distinctive breeds. Breeders are cordially invited to compete for the premiums offered, and assist in making a large and fine exhibit of their stock. Every facility will be rendered by the officers of the Society in their behalf.

Eastern Maine State Fair,

1888.

General Arrangements.

The sixth annual exhibition of the Eastern Maine State Fair will be held in the City of Bangor, Maine, commencing Tuesday morning, Aug. 28th, and continuing Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, Aug. 29th, 30th and 31st, at Maplewood Park, and in Norombega and City Halls.

At the Park an abundance of water will be supplied to all parts of the grounds. Substantial covered stalls and pens will be provided for fifteen hundred animals.

The hotel accommodations in Bangor cannot be excelled in Maine, and boarding houses are in almost every block. The managers of the Boston & Bangor Steamship Company will arrange to lodge and furnish meals for some five or six hundred people on board of their palace steamers. There is ample accommodation for teams, both at the grounds and up-town. Maplewood Park is barely ten minutes' easy walk from the Bangor House, and approached by a good street. The grounds are of easy access and but a few rods from the railroad station.

The buildings of the Park are conveniently arranged, and with the halls will afford plenty of room for mechanics, farmers and stock raisers to exhibit their productions, and also for the display of home-made textile fabrics, art needlework, etc. Everybody should come with the best they can furnish for the general exhibit. Bangor is easy to reach from any quarter; railways thread the country north and south, east and west, while steamers ply up and down the river and bay, affording communication with the whole coast. Low rates of fare will be offered from all points to the Fair, and the expense of attending will be quite moderate. The management extend a most cordial invitation to all to come to the Fair for 1888.

Transportation.

The following arrangements have been made with General Manager Payson Tucker, of the Maine Central Railroad, with Arthur Brown, Superintendent of the Bangor & Piscataquis Railroad, and with General Manager F. W. Cram, of the New Brunswick Railway, for the transportation of stock and articles for exhibition.

Prepayment by the exhibitor to be made at the time of shipping. The owner taking all risk of transportation, and the money to be returned on return of stock and such other articles as may be exhibited, the same not having changed hands since the shipment.

MAINE CENTRAL RAILROAD,
GENERAL MANAGER'S OFFICE,
PORTLAND, March 16th, 1888.

ALL AGENTS: The Eastern Maine State Fair will commence at Bangor, Aug. 28th, and continue to and including the 31st.

Live stock, and articles intended for exhibition, will be carried on the same terms as formerly. Shippers in each case to prepay charges for transportation at regular tariff rates, and if their stock or articles are returned at close of Fair, unsold, the amount prepaid will be refunded; any portion not returned must be charged for at regular tariff rates.

Agents will require each shipper to sign a release, a supply of which will be sent upon application to the Superintendent.

Trotting wagons, sulkies, and all such articles not strictly intended for exhibition, will not be carried free.

Agents will ascertain, as nearly as possible, the number of cars required at their stations to load live stock for the Fair, and give notice of same to G. A. Alden, Waterville, three days previous to above date.

PAYSON TUCKER,
General Manager.

The rates for transportation of exhibits to the Eastern Maine State Fair, at Bangor, August 28th to the 31st, inclusive, will be the same as granted by the Maine Central Railroad.

F. W. CRAM,
General Manager New Brunswick Railway.

ARTHUR BROWN,
Superintendent Bangor & Piscataquis Railroad.

W. M. AYER,
Superintendent Somerset Railroad.

Exhibitors desiring any information relating to transportation and passenger rates will address the Secretary of the Eastern Maine State Fair, Bangor, Maine. Excursion rates will be made by the railroads and steamboat lines to Bangor during the week of the exhibition.

The Intercolonial Railway will sell tickets at excursion rates and return stock and exhibits free, when accompanied with certificate from the Secretary.

General Manager Wm. H. Hill, Jr., of the Boston & Bangor Steamship Company, will take live stock and other articles for exhibition at the Fair, at Bangor, from Boston and way landings at the regular tariff rates, and all such exhibits will be returned free at the close of the exhibition. Trotting horses, wagons, sulkies and all such articles will come under this rule.

The Bangor & Bar Harbor S. S. Company offer the same terms as the Boston & Bangor S. S. Co.

The American Express Company will forward articles at regular rates, returning the same free when accompanied with a certificate of exhibition from the Secretary.

The Secretary will give information to those who desire accommodations during the week of the Fair.

Excellent arrangements have been made for parties desiring to camp. The purchase of season tickets by persons wishing to camp will entitle them to the free use of land in the Park to pitch their tents.

Descriptive labels, in accordance with the entries, will be furnished to exhibitors, who are required to attach the same to the article exhibited, and allow it to remain so attached during the exhibition.

Exhibitors will have the right to sell their exhibits during the Fair, but not to deliver the same until the close of the exhibition without the consent of the Board of Managers.

The Marshals and Superintendents of the various departments will meet at the President's headquarters, at 8 o'clock, on the morning of each day, to perfect arrangements for the day.

The various local officers of the Fair will wear badges when upon duty. The President and Vice President will wear badges with white ribbons; the Secretary and Treasurer, badges with blue ribbons, and the Superintendents of the different departments badges with red ribbons.

Premium list, posters, or any information in regard to the Fair, may be had by applying to the Secretary of the Fair, Bangor, Maine.

Superintendents.

1. The general supervision of the exhibition will be under the control and direction of the President, and in his absence, of the Vice President, and all general orders will be issued from his office. During the exhibition the Superintendents of the different departments of the Fair will have charge and control of their respective departments. Any complaint of irregularities, neglect or violation of the rules and regulations of the Society should be promptly made to the President's headquarters.

2. The Superintendents of Departments will see that the divisions in their respective departments are in proper order for the reception of exhibits, and for the convenience of exhibitors and visitors.

3. The managers will take every precaution for the safe keeping of animals or articles on exhibition, after arrival and arrangement for exhibition; but the Society will not be responsible for damage that may occur to animals or articles on exhibition. Exhibitors must give personal attention to their animals and articles, and at the close of the Fair attend to their removal.

4. Exhibitors must see to the delivery of their contributions at the Fair Grounds; the Society cannot in any case make provision for their transportation, or be subjected to any expense therefor, either in the delivery, at, or return from, the exhibition; but all the expenses connected therewith must be provided for by the exhibitors.

5. Exhibitors should give early notice to the Secretary, by correspondence, of their intention to exhibit, stating amount of space, pens or stalls required, that ample provision may be made for their accommodation.

6. For the convenience of exhibitors covered stalls will be provided for the stock and litter for bedding, with water, will be supplied without charge, so that animals, on their arrival at the Fair Grounds, need not be removed until the exhibition is closed. Exhibitors will be required to furnish their hay and grain which will be for sale on the grounds at market rates.

Instruction to Judges.

7. Persons serving on Committees of Awards should be punctual in attendance at the time and place designated for meeting, as such punctuality will prevent confusion, and enable the committee to perfect the examinations with less delay, and to make prompt return of their books to the Secretary's office.

8. Committees must not take their books from the grounds, but leave them at the Secretary's headquarters where they can be obtained when the examinations are to be resumed.

9. Committees must confine their awards strictly to premiums offered by the Society.

10. No Judge or Superintendent is authorized to make any additions or alterations; gratuities may be recommended for meritorious articles not named in the premium list, but the Society reserves the exclusive control in such cases as to paying such award.

11. As soon as committees complete their awards, they will deliver their reports to the Secretary's office.

12. Due notice will be given, through the official program, to Judges, and by Department Superintendents to exhibitors, of the time for examination of animals and articles entered for competition and premiums.

13. The Judges will report not only the animals and articles entitled to premiums, but also those next in merit in each class, to meet the contingencies of any objection which may arise to the awards, and also that they may receive commendation. Any animal or article which, in the opinion of the Judges, deserves a special commendation will also be reported in their report.

14. Regard will be paid to purity of blood, as established by pedigree, symmetry, size, and general characteristics, of the several breeds of animals; and the Judges will make proper allowance for age, feeding and other circumstances. They are expressly required not to give encouragement to overfed animals in the breeding classes.

15. If the Judges are not satisfied as to the regularity of the entries in their respective classes, they will apply to the Secretary for information, and should there be any doubt, after examination, or if the animal or article is of such character as not to be entitled to exhibition, in competition, they will report the facts to the Secretary, in which case there will be no award, the exhibitor having the right of appeal to the Executive Committee.

16. When there is no competition, or but one competitor in a class, the Judges may award the first premium, if meritorious, and 33⅓ per cent. of the premium will be retained by the Society. The Judges will mention in awarding the premiums that there was no competition.

17. Medals awarded or gratuities recommended by the Judges must receive the approval of the Executive Officers.

18. No person who is an exhibitor can act as judge on the class in which he exhibits. And during the examination by the Judges if any person interferes with them, by letter or otherwise, he will be excluded from the competition. But exhibitors, when requested, are expected to make verbal or written statements concerning their contributions.

19. As one great object of the Society is to collect valuable information upon the subject-matter of the exhibition, the several committees are requested to gather all the information possible from exhibitors in their classes, and to make their reports as full as time and circumstances will permit.

20. Committees will make no awards for animals or articles not meritorious. An animal or article entered for exhibition cannot compete for more than one premium, except that animals are not prohibited from competing for herd premium or sweepstakes, and all oxen and steers are allowed to compete in town teams and pulling oxen.

21. The reports of the Judges must be handed in to the Secretary's office at the Fair Grounds, before 9 o'clock Thursday morning, August 30.

22. When the Judges have made their decisions, they will personally see that the premium cards are attached to the pens of sheep, swine, and other articles, and premium ribbons to cattle and horses. First premium, a blue ribbon; second premium, a red ribbon; third premium, a white ribbon. Premium ribbons or cards not awarded must be returned with the book of entry to which they belong.

23. At 2 o'clock P. M. on Tuesday, the books will be delivered to the Judges at the Secretary's office.

24. The exhibition of stock in the cattle rings and on the track will take place at the time specified; and animals not prepared at the proper time and place may, at the discretion of the Judges, be ruled out of competition.

25. Stock, etc., will be marked with cards furnished by the Secretary, designating the division and number of entry, and during the exhibition they must be placed entirely under the management of the officers of the Society.

26. Authentic pedigrees of blood stock of all kinds will be required, which must be filed with the Secretary at the time of entry. No animal will be allowed a premium unless sound. This rule will be rigidly enforced in all breeding classes.

27. No animal shall be excluded from competition for the first premium in any class by reason of having taken the same premium at previous fairs.

28. Entries will be made in strict compliance with the offered premium list, and awards must be made in accordance with the rules. Parties must, therefore, take particular pains to have stock and articles entered properly.

29. The decision of the Awarding Committee will be final, except in cases of gross mistake or fraud.

30. Appeals to the Board of Executive Officers from the decision of the Awarding Committee must be in writing, and must state clearly the reasons for, and facts by which it is proposed to establish the appeal, and the same must be made before the close of the exhibition.

Premiums.

31. Blue ribbon or card denotes first premium; red ribbon or card denotes second premium; white ribbon or card denotes third premium.

32. Premiums will not be paid on animals or articles removed from the exhibition before the close, unless such removal has the special approval of the Executive Officers of the Society.

33. Cash premiums will be paid by the Treasurer, on and after October 10, 1888, at his office in Bangor, Me., and he will forward any premium not so paid, to any point, in such manner as the person entitled to the same may indicate in writing, the following provision having been adopted,—

That all premiums awarded, except the Society's medals, may be liable to pro-rata reduction sufficient to meet any deficiency that may occur in the receipts, to meet said premiums and other expenses of the Fair. Medals and diplomas will be delivered as soon as they are secured from the manufacturer.

34. A regular meeting of the trustees and officers will be held at the President's headquarters, at 9 A. M. each day of the Fair at the Fair Grounds.

35. A postal and package office will be kept open during the Fair at the Secretary's office. Correspondence intended for exhibitors or visitors, that is addressed in care of the Eastern Maine State Fair, Bangor, Me., will be forwarded promptly to said postal office at the grounds.

Guests.

36. Ample provision will be made for the accommodation of reporters for the press. A press headquarters has been provided at the grounds.

Railroads.

37. Persons who intend to exhibit, if they will notify the Secretary by which railroad they desire to send their exhibits, he will inform them of the amount of reduction that has been agreed upon.

38. Telephone and telegraph connections at the grounds with all points.

When two articles in any department are both adjudged entitled to a first premium, the first and second premiums will be equally divided between such contestants.

Special premiums will be offered and the same will be announced in the papers from time to time.

No premium will be awarded to an animal unworthy, even though there be no competition.

No spirituous liquors will be allowed to be sold on the premises.

The exhibitor or an attendant must at all times be in attendance of stock for the purpose of giving information to the Judges and visitors.

Smoking will not be allowed in any stall or stable. Superintendents of Departments will enforce this rule.

Price of Admission.

For single admission to Park, 50 cents. An additional fee will be charged for seats in the Grand Stand. Admission to Norombega and City Halls, 25 cents—admitting to both halls.

In no case will exhibitors' season tickets be delivered unless their entrance fees have been paid.

Children under 14 years of age will be admitted to the Park at half price.

Membership, season and exhibitors' tickets are not transferable and will be taken up if presented for admission by any other person than the one to whom issued.

Season tickets, $2.00, admitting to Park and Halls.

Necessary attendants to Exhibitors of Stock will be admitted free only at the Stock entrance, on Buck street, prior to 8 o'clock A. M. and after 5 o'clock P. M. each day of the Exhibition. Between the hours of 8 A. M. and 5 o'clock P. M. attendants will not be admitted free, but must have a ticket of admission. Exhibitors will be furnished with special attendants tickets, permitting them to remain on the grounds during the exhibition. On this ticket the name of the attendant and of the exhibitor must be plainly written, and in no case will they be transferable. After the close of the exhibition each day, campers, exhibitors, and attendants will be admitted at the Buck street entrance. To be admitted to the Park after 10 P. M. a special pass will be required by the Gate Keeper. Exhibitors should make application to the Secretary at the time they make their entry of the number of attendants required.

Exhibitors of single animals will not be entitled to free admission for attendants.

Persons exhibiting in two or more classes will have free admission for only a sufficient number of attendants to take care of the stock.

LIST OF PREMIUMS.

CATTLE DEPARTMENT.

Superintendent of this Department, J. E. Shaw.

Entries close in this Department Saturday, August 18th.

This Rule is Imperative.

1. Each exhibitor in this department will be charged an entrance fee of $2.00, which must acompany the entry.

2. Animals competing for these premiums must have been owned in Maine at least six months before the exhibition.

3. Exhibitors competing for the fat stock premiums shall furnish a writtrn statement in detail of their method of feeding, etc., and cannot divide a pair for the purpose of competing for single premiums.

4. The Executive Officers shall be allowed to reject any animal they may consider unworthy.

5. Awarding Committees in Cattle Department are expressly instructed that it is their duty in every case to require from each exhibitor, in lots of PURE BREEDS, satisfactory evidence of purity of breeding, as claimed; and each committee in awarding a premium in any such lot will be understood to say by such award that, in their opinion, the animals receiving a premium are beyond a reasonable doubt purely bred, as claimed. They are further instructed that if they shall have good reason to believe that any exhibitor, by false entry or otherwise, attempts to deceive the committee or the public, and obtain a premium by misrepresentation, they shall report the fact at once to the President, who will cause an investigation of the case; and if it is clearly shown that fraud was attempted, the exhibitor thus offending must, upon order of the Executive Officers of the Society, be excluded from competition at this Fair.

6. Breeding animals, exhibited as such, must in breeding condition, and evidence must be produced, if required, that they are breeders and not barren animals. All three-years-old heifers in the several classes must have borne a calf previous to the exhibition or a heifer cannot compete.

7. All applications for entry of thoroughbred cattle must be accompanied with the name and age (in years and months) of the animal to be exhibited, and the name of its sire and dam.

8. Pedigrees of all thoroughbred animals, in all cases must be traceable to some American or foreign herd-book for the particular breeds to which they belong.

9. Judges will not award sweepstates premiums in this department in any division unless the animals are superior in every respect.

10. The public exhibition and exhibit of breeding cattle, working oxen and steers will be made at the cattle rings and not upon the race track.

11. Exhibitors in this department will report at the office of the Superintendent at 8 o'clock each morning for instructions.

HORSE DEPARTMENT.

Superintendent of this department, F. O. Beal, Vice-President of the Eastern Maine State Fair.

Entries close August 18th.

1. Exhibitors in this department will be charged an entrance fee of 10 per cent of the aggregate amount of premium offered in the class in which entry is made and the same must accompany the entry. Exhibitors whose entry fees in the horse department amount to three dollars or over, will be entitled to an exhibitor's season ticket, admitting to Park and Halls. In case the entry fee in this department amounts to less than three dollars, the exhibitor will be entitled to the season ticket provided the difference between the amount of entry fee and three dollars is paid.

2. In testing the speed of horses, each animal three years old and over is to go to wagon or harness. In making the awards in this class, the general good qualities, such as breeding, styles, action, constitution and enduring properties, as well as the speed of the animal, are to be taken into consideration.

3. Exhibitors of horses are required to keep the doors of their stalls open from 9 to 12, and from 1 to 5 each day. Non-compliance with this rule will forfeit all claim for premiums.

4. [As horses possessing no merit whatever, and not worthy of exhibition, have in some cases been entered merely in order to secure stabling at the expense of the Society, the Superintendent of this department is empowered, when any cases of this kind are reported, to order the animals, so entered, off the grounds.]

5. Exhibitors in this department will report at the office of the Superintendent at 8 o'clock each morning for instructions.

6. Exhibitors are required in divisions for trotting stock stallions and stallions for raising gentlemen's driving horses, to furnish pedigree, official record and merit of progeny at the time of making entry.

7. In case two stallions score the same and the highest number of points they will be considered equal, and the first and second premiums will be divided equally between the two. In the event that three stallions score the same and the highest number of points, the first, second and third premiums will be divided equally between the three. If the first premium be awarded without such a contest, and in competition for the second premium, two or more of the contestants score the same and the highest number of points the second and third premiums will be divided equally between such competitors, and in such a case there would be no third premium; but if only those entitled to the third premium score the same number of points this premium would be divided equally between those having the same number of points.

8. The Judges will examine the records and if found correct will award the premiums accordingly. It is for the interest of the exhibitor that he make his records as plain and clear as possible that he may not be deprived of any points for want of evidence.

The record of a colt shall be counted but once; for instance, if a colt has a record as a 2 years old, 3 years old and four years old the owner may select which record he will claim but in no case shall be counted but once.

10. What is meant by, "Have, or can show 3 minutes, etc.," is the horse must either have a record or show to the Judges a full mile to determine his speed.

11. For awarding the premiums on 4 years old, 3 years old, 2 years old and one year old geldings and fillies the Judges will be governed by size, style, action, disposition, speed and pedigree.

POULTRY DEPARTMENT.

RULES.

There will be no charge for entry in this department.

1. The society will furnish stands and coops. Exhibitors must furnish attendants and feed and see that the coops are kept sweet and clean.

2. No chick or fowl will be allowed on exhibition or to compete for premiums, unless exhibited in coops provided by the Society, the rent of which will be free.

3. No premium will be awarded unless the specimens possess special merit, as the object is to encourage the breeding of high class poultry.

4. Merit rather than gross weight shall govern the Judge in making his awards on chicks.

5. Fowl and chicks to be shown in pairs. No exhibitor shall be allowed to enter more than three coops of fowl and three of chicks of any one breed.

6. Fowl or chicks intended for sale must be exhibited in coops provided by the Society.

7. All entries must be made to the Secretary on or before August 18th, 1888, as none will be received after that date.

8. All poultry for competition and exhibition must be in position by noon of the first day, unless unavoidably detained on the railroad, as judging will commence at 1 p. m. Experts will judge the exhibition.

9. Fowl in moult not disqualified to be judged by their size, shape and general characteristics, and no premium to be awarded unless the specimen possesses merit.

10. The borrowing of birds, or buying to return after the Fair, must be stopped, and any person detected in such practice will be barred out of the show and all premiums thus awarded withheld.

11. No award will be made on chicks unless of sufficient size to indicate merit.

12. The poultry exhibit will be under the charge of a Superintendent who will be required by the Society to enforce all rules.

13. Space will be assigned by the Superintendent, and the moving or changing of fowl once in position, must be under his supervision.

Premiums are offered on the following varieties, of $2 1st, 1 2d, and 50c. for 3d., for fowl, and the same premium as for fowl is offered for chicks.

POMOLOGICAL AND HORTICULTURAL.

Superintendent of this department, Henry McLaughlin.

SPECIAL REGULATIONS.

1. The general regulations will govern this department, as far as applicable thereto, and except as herein otherwise provided.

2. Entries may be made at the office of the Secretary, personally or by letter, until August 27th, and after that at Concert Hall, annex to Norombega Hall, until 1 o'clock P. M. on Tuesday. Best unripe fruit may be awarded a premium if otherwise worthy.

3. Exhibitors are requested to present full and accurate lists of the varieties of fruit or other articles to be entered; and to specify the premium for which each article is entered; also to affix their names and P. O. addresses, so that the same may be correctly transferred to the books and exhibition cards.

☞ Persons intending to make entries will confer a favor by sending lists of the same to the Secretary at an early day.

4. All fruits and flowers offered for premiums must have been grown by the exhibitor; and any violation of this rule will debar or forfeit the premium. Specimens offered for exhibition only, by others than the growers, must in all cases have the name of the grower affixed, if known.

5. All fruits and flowers exhibited, must, as far as possible, be correctly named according to the standard nomenclature adopted by the Society, and it will be the duty of the standing committees of the Society to examine labels and correct all errors in nomenclature during the exhibition.

6. All fruits offered for premiums must be composed of exactly the number of specimens, or quantity, named in the schedule.

7. Dishes and labels for the exhibition of fruits and phials and stands for cut flowers, will be furnished by the Society.

8. Exhibitors must see to the delivery of their contributions, and will be required to put them in the places designated for them. After the articles are arranged, they will be under the exclusive charge of the Society, and the owners will not have liberty to remove them until the exhibition is closed. All reasonable precautions will be taken for the safe keeping of articles on exhibition, after their arrival and arrangement upon the table; but the Society will not be responsible for any loss or damage that may occur.

9. The committees are authorized to recommend diplomas for any new or rare fruits, flowers, plants, vegetables or articles of merit for which no premiums have been offered.

10. When a specimen has been presented for identification, the exhibitor shall communicate all the information he possesses as to the origin and the local appellation.

11. No entrance fee shall be charged on exhibits in this department and exhibitors will be admitted to the Hall Tuesday, August 28th, free, but after this they will be charged the regular admission of 25 cents, which will admit to Norombega and Concert Halls; or an exhibitor's season tickets will be sold at $1.00, admitting to both Halls, or an exhibitor's season ticket for $2.00, admitting to Park and Halls.

12. No person can compete for more than one prize with the same variety of fruit, but may compete for the best exhibit.

SCHEDULE OF PREMIUMS.

CLASS 1.

APPLES.

FIRST DIVISION.

Entries for all premiums in this division must consist of five specimens of each variety exhibited, and (except Nos. 2 and 3) of at least twenty correctly named varieties. Entries for premiums Nos. 2 and 3 must be separate and distinct collections, not embracing any other collection or specimens, and in awarding the premiums regard will be had both to the quality of the specimens and the value of the varieties exhibited.

By "named varities" is meant such as are named and described in some standard work on Pomology, or have been named and approved by some National or State Horticultural Society.

In adopting 20 as the number of varieties required in this collection (No. 1) the Society does not intend to encourage the multiplication of varieties; and the committee will be instructed, in awarding the premiums, to have regard to quality and value rather than to the number of varieties, and will be authorized to recommend diplomas for meritorious collections embracing less than the number of varieties required as above.
